RULE IN FAVOR OF 'WITNESSES'

U.S. Supreme Court Sets
Aside Convictions.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8 (U. P.) — The supreme court in separate rulings yesterday set aside convictions of two members of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith who distributed religious literature in government and private housing projects.

Justice Hugo L. Black, who wrote both opinions, held that "certainly neither congress nor federal agencies acting pursuant to congressional authorization may abridge freedom of press and religion safeguarded by the first amendment." Each decision was by a vote of five to three. Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone and Justices Stanley Reed and Harold H. Burton dissented.

Grace Marsh, a woman member of the Jehovah's Witnesses faith, fined $50 in Mobile, Ala., for distributing literature on a housing project in Chickasaw, Ala., a suburb of Mobile. The project was owned by the Gulf Shipyards Corp.

Her Plea Upheld
The Alabama court of appeals rejected her appeal. She told the supreme court that the conviction invaded her rights of free speech, press and free worship, since the company had been devoting the housing project to public use.

Black wrote in his case that the fact that property rights are held by other than the public "does not justify the state's permitting a corporation to govern a community of citizens so as to restrict their fundamental liberties."

Neither, he said, does it justify the enforcement of such restraint by the application of a state statute.

"Ownership does not mean absolute domination. The more an owner opens up his property for use by the public in general, the more do his rights become circumscribed by the statutory and constitutional rights of those who use it."

Did Not Have License
The second case, which Black said differed from the first only in that the housing project involved was federally owned, was that of A. R. Tucker, a Jehovah's Witness member who was convicted of not obtaining a peddler's license for his religious work at the Hondo, Tex., navigation village, a federal housing project.

Tucker appealed directly to the high court after Medina County, Tex., courts fined him $1 for an unauthorized tour of homes in the village. The project prohibited peddling without permission under a rule based on a section of the Texas penal code.

He claimed the arrest interfered with his rights of free speech, press and worship.

WEEK OF PRAYER TO BE OBSERVED HERE

Indiana churches of the North and South sides and of Irvington will mark the Week of Prayer with union services in their respective sections.

The North Side churches will hold their celebration on Wednesday night at 7:30 in the Meridian Heights Presbyterian church. The South Side congregations will meet tonight through Friday in a different church each night and the Irvington churches meet tonight through Friday in the Irvington Presbyterian church.

Dr. Dallas L. Browning, pastor of the North Methodist church, will speak Wednesday night at the Meridian Heights church. The Rev. Ernest F. Roesti, chairman of the North Side Ministerial association, will preside.

South Side church folk will hold prayer services at 7:30 tonight in the Trinity Methodist church; tomorrow night in the Belmont United Brethren church; Thursday night, in the River Avenue Baptist church; and Friday night, the Blaine Avenue Methodist church. Speakers will be changed nightly and no minister will be heard in his own church.

Speakers for the union services in the Irvington Presbyterian church, tonight through Friday in succession are: the Rev. Edward C. McCance; the Rev. R. F. Keicher; Dr. John B. Ferguson; Dr. Clarence A. Shaeke; and Dr. F. W. Wiegmann.
