RESTORING LIBERES TO BE HARD TASK

Repatriation of Freed Prisoners at Devil's Island Proves To Be Puzzling for New French Official.

(One of a Series)

By JOHN A. THALE
Times Foreign Correspondent

DEVIL'S ISLAND, French Guiana, April 3.—Prisoners still are being deported to the infamous French Guiana penal camp, despite France's announcement that they will be closed out as rapidly as possible.

This is just one of the unavoidable jokers in the plan to free and repatriate the deportees whose blood and agony stained French history.

Prison officials here have confirmed that convicts are being brought to the mainland prison camps from the islands of Martinique and Guadeloupe. Some have been deported from France since before the war, however.

Local penal officials still are hazy on how the repatriation of somewhere between 250 and 400 convicts still in the French Guiana camps is going to be financed.

Lt. Col. Xavier Sainz—who, during the war was a prisoner of the Germans for a time, before escaping in 1941 to fight with the French in North Africa—has been sent out here to help close out the penitentiary service. He said that a fund of 3,000,000 francs ($25,200) has been appropriated by France for the prisoner repatriation.

Few Ships Reach Port

However, even if the money is available from France—which currently needs all it can get—shipping space is another question. It isn't even in sight.

A small vessel, usually from Martinique, on an approximate once a month basis, is about all the oceanic transport the port of Cayenne sees these days.

There is also the question of an estimated 2000 liberates former prisoners who have served their sentences and who now are forced by circumstances to remain in Guiana to eke out a miserable existence as they can.

Most of them, who retain even a flickering hope of seeing France again, are wondering if they, as a class, will come under the repatriation scheme.

Liberates Have Little Money

To the liberate, the approximately 30,000 francs ($250) necessary for the fare home represents an impossible, undreamed of sum.

In the penal camps, prisoners are divided into three classes, according to their working ability. The best workers get a little more than one cent a day, next best get a cent, and the least productive workers, nothing.

One typical liberate was freed recently after having served 13 years. On his release, penitentiary service officials reported, he was given the total of 1200 francs ($10.08) which he had earned.

More abstract is the question of just how far you can "repatriate" a man who has been burned to a vacant-eyed, shambling hulk under brutal discipline and man-killing labors in hot, unhealthy jungle and river camps. That is what has happened to many of the Frenchmen deported here.

Escapes Still Hunted

French officials aren't inclined to strain at the point of repatriation at the time.

"The convicts are better off here, as it stands now," one of them commented. "The way France is today, they'll eat better if they stay in Guiana."

A majority of prisoners are having their sentences canceled in the French move to wipe out the penal colony, Lt. Col. Sainz explained.

But the penitentiary service still is making strenuous efforts to get back prisoners who win their million-to-one escape gamble through jungles and rivers and shark-filled seas to freedom.

Two of them recently slipped off from the St. Laurent camp on the

GOOD MANNERS NO. 6

BOYS OPEN 'POUND' WAGON; 3 ARE HELD

Three North side teen-agers who liberated the "inmates" of a city dog pound wagon at 22d st. and Central ave. yesterday were held by juvenile aid authorities.

The youths were nabbed in the immediate neighborhood after they had thrown open the dog truck doors, freeing four tail-wagging poodles. Dogcatcher Clarence By identified the "liberators."

Policewoman Marie Berry asked the boys if they were aware one of the hounds had been condemned as vicious. They said he must be because they lifted the dog in question out of the truck in their arms.

"Why did you do it?" asked Mrs. Berry.

The 15-year-old leader of the lads replied: "Because we love dogs." Mrs. Berry admitted that was a pretty good reason.

POLICE SHOOT BULL AFTER LONG CHASE

A large bull, destined for local meat markets, put off the inevitable for several hours yesterday when he leaped over two gates at the Capitol Packing Co., 801 Kentucky ave., and wandered over southwest Indianapolis before being felled by police bullets.

Four squad cars and the police emergency squad were sent out to corral the bull and handle the large crowd of spectators that followed the animal which was finally cornered near the W. Morris st. over-head of the Illinois-Central railroad elevation.

In on the kill were Sgt. James Langford, armed with a shotgun, and Patrolmen George Kahl and Edward Clark, each armed with revolvers. The carcass was recovered by the packing company.
