

5th Vessel Sinks As Signs Of A-Bomb Damage Mount

Radioactivity Slows Close Check on Battered Ships; Sub Is Saved by Beaching

OFF BIKINI ATOLL, July 2.—Operations Crossroads scientists have determined that the atomic bomb exploded in Bikini lagoon was "somewhat less powerful" than the bomb exploded over Nagasaki last year, Vice Adm. W. H. P. Blandy announced today.

The bomb used at Bikini to determine its effect against navy ships—an effect thus far gauged in terms of five ships sunk, six wrecked and half the fleet of 73 ships damaged—was of the same type as the Nagasaki missile. That bomb devastated 10 square miles of the Japanese city.

Although less powerful than its prototype, the Bikini bomb, according to Adm. Blandy, was said by task force scientists to be a "perfectly normal Nagasaki type bomb."

Find More Damage

Evidence of the fury of the atom bomb swelled as boarding parties for the first time got close enough to the target ships in Bikini lagoon to see the damage wrought in Monday's cosmic blast.

Crews with scientific equipment moved cautiously among the stricken ships to measure the damage.

Secretary of Navy James Forrestal said it was "too early to draw specific conclusions," but that he held a "broad and general opinion that there will still be navies in the world."

The guinea pig fleet appeared in much better shape from a distance than from close up. Every passing hour brought new evidence of the magnitude of the destruction.

Cruiser Goes Down

Shortly before noon today, the Japanese cruiser Sakawa, shredded until it looked like a floating pagoda, upended and sank.

A few hours earlier Adm. Blandy announced the destroyer Anderson had joined the transports Gilliam and Carlisle and the destroyer Lamson on the bottom.

Tabulated on the basis of latest checks, here is the box score:

SUNK: The cruiser Sakawa, destroyers Lamson and Anderson, and transports Gilliam and Carlisle.

HEAVILY DAMAGED: Submarine Skate, battleship Nagato, battleship Arkansas, light carrier Independence, heavy cruiser Pensacola, and one landing ship.

Sub Is Ripped Open

LIGHTLY DAMAGED: Battleship Pennsylvania, New York and Nevada; carrier Saratoga, cruiser Salt Lake City, landing craft Medium No. 1, yard oiler No. 160, and

ATOM DEBATE NOT STILLED

All Happy Over Test That May Settle Nothing.

BIKINI, July 2.—The atom bomb test apparently satisfied everyone involved in it, but paradoxically it may settle nothing.

Vice Adm. W. H. P. Blandy, commander of Joint Task Force One, was pleased because operations proceeded according to plan. The 27,000-foot lethal cloud behaved just as the admiral said it would, and no one of the 42,000 men in the test got hurt.

Maj. Gen. A. E. Kepner, Adm. Blandy's deputy for air, was happy because his airmen pulled it off without a hitch.

Scientists aboard the U. S. S. Panamint said the test was a success.

Solace for Opponents

Even the Federation of American Scientists, which clamored against the experiment, can find some solace in what happened. As early as May 26 the scientists predicted only a couple of ships would be hurt.

So, on the basis of what happened:

The navy can claim it lost only three ships out of 73:

The air force can claim it is able to drop an atom bomb accurately.

Scientists can claim the tests were unnecessary—they practically predicted the outcome.

DEATH OF GI HALTS WAR TRIAL OF JAPS

TOKYO, July 2 (U. P.)—The war crimes trial of leading Japanese suspects was adjourned abruptly today when an American soldier electrocuted himself by falling on a power line and causing the courtroom lights to go out.

Battlewagon New York Still Proudly Rides the Waves

As predicted in words "Old Sailors Never Die," painted on the bulkhead of the battlewagon New York the day before the blast, the old ship rides the waters of Bikini lagoon as proudly as ever 24 hours after the atomic explosion. It Is 'Business as Usual' for Patrons at Sally Rand's Again

SAN FRANCISCO, July 2 (U. P.)—The drinks were on the house at Sally Rand's scotch-and-strip emporium today.

"Anyone who saw anything lewd or base in her act had to have a perverted mind," said the judge.

His remark caused no end of red faces at police headquarters where Sally was twice hauled last week for putting on a "lewd and indecent" performance.

Sally was jubilant as she stepped from the courtroom a free woman. "Fun is fun," she said, "and this is enough."

She said there would be free wine for the patrons last night, but indicated the police department would not be included in the invitation.

The next time the boys in blue visit the club, she said, they will have to pay the cover charge.
