

DEATH WALKS WITH BRIDE AT WEDDING

dab of powder on her cheek and the party left for the church where Mr. Mostantuono and the Rev. Fr. Francis Agius waited.

Head bowed, with her gray-haired father, she followed her maid of honor up the church steps. It was 4:40 p. m. Death walked behind them.

They stepped down the aisle to the strains of the wedding march, and the church full of friends turned to admire the beauty in brocaded white satin.

She stumbled and grasped her father's arm with both hands. He patted her hand reassuringly and stopped to help her untangle the train from her feet. She gasped and collapsed in the aisle.

Her mother, Antoinette, hastened from the front pew. Her father began fanning her, then he carried her to the church lawn. Someone summoned Dr. Alexander Vivona.

"She's dead," he said.

Twelve members of the fire department sought unsuccessfully to revive her.

Inside the church, Mr. Mostantuono finally sent his best man to find out why the wedding was delayed. He left the church in tears and locked himself in his room.

"She had a rheumatic heart," Dr. Vivona said. "The embarrassment of stumbling over her train was too much for it."

INDIANA REBEKAHS OPEN PARLEY HERE

Toxicologists then found mercury in the stomach of the body of Mrs. Minnie McConnell, mother-in-law of the ill woman. The body of "Uncle Fred" Giddings, 92-year-old farmer-tarred for Mrs. Lockman, was exhumed and mercury deposits found in his stomach. State police then went to Iowa and also found deposits of mercury in the vital organs of Mrs. Hattie Calhoun, another Lockman patient. Her body was exhumed from a Burlington, Ia., cemetery.

However, state pathologists found that evidence that the mercury actually was the cause of the deaths was not conclusive. Laboratory tests were continued.

Mrs. Lockman faced murder charges in the death of Mrs. McConnell. The young Mrs. McConnell, recovered from her illness, was expected to be one of the grand jury witnesses.
