HOLIDAY TEA IS SET AT WARREN

Girls Will Be Hostesses at Thanksgiving Fete.

The home economics department of Warren Central high school will hold its annual Thanksgiving tea from 1:15 to 2:45 Thursday.

Special guests will be Hortense Hurst and Kathleen Gillouddy, state supervisors of vocational home economics.

Girls of the classes will act as hostesses. The helpers are Helen Glende, Lila LaMere, Aris Jo Stites, Wanda Swem, Susie Flass and Shirley Beaver.

Quill-Seroll Dinner
 The Quill and Seroll chapters of Warren Central will hold a dinner Saturday night at the school. Members of the Journalism fraternity chapter are Margaret Higginbotham, Doreen Sanders, Ann Gould, Jacquelyn Kirby and Kenneth Tuxhorn.

Gray-Y clubs for boys of the fifth and sixth grades are now active at Shadeland, Lowell and Pleasant Run.

Officers of the clubs are: Pleasant Run, Cedric Ransom, president; Lowell, James Applegate, president; and Richard Denton, secretary; Shadeland, Stanley Melton, president; and Tommy Nichols, vice president.

The Rev. Werner Krug, of Zion Evangelical Lutheran church, New Palestine, will speak at the Warren Central high school program Thursday at the school.

JAMES F. CARROLL, above, president of the Indiana state chamber of commerce, is new chairman of the local Red Cross chapter. He succeeds Wallace I. Longworth, who served as chairman since 1942.

In accepting the post, Mr. Carroll, who has been on the Red Cross board of directors for the last four years, praised Mr. Longworth as "outstanding in the country."

He called for continued support of the Red Cross to "fulfill obligations to veterans and servicemen and to promote health and safety services."

Other Red Cross officers re-elected were: William H. Book, vice chairman; Miss Agnes Cruse, secretary; and William P. Flynn, treasurer.

Mr. Carroll, who was chairman of the Red Cross war fund drive in 1943, resigned recently as president of the Indiana Bell Telephone Co.

NO SIGNS OF FLU EPIDEMIC SEEN

Reported Cases Are 50% Off 1945 Figures.

By Science Service
 WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. — The next week or so may tell whether we are going to have that predicted influenza epidemic this winter. So far it has shown no signs in reports of cases to the U. S. public health service here.

For the week ending Nov. 16, latest on which figures are available, influenza totalled 2104 cases throughout the nation. This is about half of the 4148 cases reported for the corresponding week last year.

To give a better comparison from year to year of epidemic diseases that have a peak in winter the Public Health Service is now giving totals from the low point each year instead of from the calendar year.

Influenza reaches its low about mid-August. From then through Nov. 16 there were 14,940 cases this year, 21,841 cases in 1945, and the expected number on the basis of a five-year median would be 14,276.

Polio Cases Decline
 Of the Nov. 16 total of 2104 cases, Texas reported 1039, Virginia 317, North Carolina 309 and Arizona 130. The first two have been reporting high flu totals for some weeks. The Arizona figure represents a jump from 51 cases the previous week, which may or may not signify a coming outbreak.

Infantile paralysis hangs on tenaciously though it is now late in the season for this disease.
