Marshall's New Task Ends Wife's Retirement Dream

Virginia Farm Home Is Still Far Away

By KEYES BEECH
Times Foreign Correspondent
HONOLULU, Jan. 9.—"Whatever the general does, I will do."

There was just a trace of wistfulness in white-haired Katherine Tupper Marshall's remark. Her husband, Gen. George C. Marshall, is the new secretary of state and the peace and quiet of the Virginia farm to which they longed to retire at the end of the war is just as far away as it ever was.

"That's my favorite picture of him," Mrs. Marshall said, looking at the newspaper which announced her husband's new job. "It was taken at the beginning of the war and his face looks so serene and untroubled. He hasn't looked that way since."

Declines to Comment
Mrs. Marshall declined to comment on the general's new assignment. She said: "I'd rather not say anything until he gets here." Gen. Marshall is en route to Hawaii from China. He will rest here for several days before proceeding to Washington. His wife, a sinus sufferer, came here several weeks ago to escape the cold and dampness of the Chinese winter.

Mrs. Marshall said she wrote her recently published book "Together," the story of her life with the general to "show what kind of man he really is. So few people know him as a human being. He is not over-modest, or retiring, as many people seem to think."

DREAMS FADE—With the appointment of her husband, Gen. George C. Marshall as secretary of state, Mrs. Katherine Tupper Marshall (above) must give up her dreams of retiring to their quiet Virginia farm and follow her famous husband.

"The general knows his capacities but this knowledge is tempered with a humility and selflessness that I think is found in few great men," she added.

"Does that sound like hero worship on the part of an adoring wife? Well, I don't consider him a hero—he wouldn't like it if I did—but I do consider him a great man."

Mrs. Marshall said that her book was a top secret project, which even the general himself didn't know about until it was finished.

Her First Effort

"It was my first literary effort and I didn't know how it was going to come out," she said. "It came about when the general was sent to China. We had been looking forward so much to retiring and he was afraid I'd be lonely, so he suggested that I straighten out all the notes, clippings and letters I'd been collecting. So I did and the book was the result."

If Mrs. Marshall managed to conceal her excitement over her husband's new eminence, Anna, her Chinese maid, did not. Anna was beaming with pleasure, because she will accompany her mistress to Washington.
