

Abandon White River VA Hospital Site

Cost $500,000 Over Estimate Of Engineers

Jenner Informs Gates of Decision

By DANIEL M. KIDNEY

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Because price of the White river-site for the new $2,500,000 veterans administration hospital in Indianapolis exceeds army engineers' estimate by $500,000 it is to be abandoned, Senator William E. Jenner (R. Ind.) informed Governor Gates today.

Instead, the site of the present veterans administration facility or a new one near the Indiana university medical center, will be used, Senator Jenner said. Official announcement of the new site proposal is expected to be made shortly, he wrote the governor after a telephone conversation. The governor said he was interested in the directive VA will issue for selection of an architect for the project.

Misses Flood Hearings

He told the senator that he was unable to attend the senate appropriations subcommittee hearings here to try and boost federal flood control funds for the state. But Secretary Clyde Black of the Indiana flood control commission arrived this morning to present the state's case.

He was accompanied by Ray Donaldson, secretary to Senator Homer E. Capehart (R. Ind.). Senator Capehart is in Indianapolis today on business. Before leaving last night he announced that he expects to take his newspaper subcommittee to Alaska the latter part of August to survey the possibilities of obtaining private manufacture of newsprint in the government forests there. He estimates that about 500,000 tons could be produced, he said.

Here's How Flier Could See Disc

By Science Service

WASHINGTON, July 9.—Avisitors reporting "flying saucers" may have been fooled by images of the dials on the instrument panels of their own planes. There are two ways in which this could happen.

Sometimes the sloping windshield of a plane reflects the dials as in a mirror, though less clearly. An imaginative pilot—especially if he is a little tired—might easily interpret these reflections as flying discs, out ahead.

The other kind of self-deception might occur when a pilot finds it necessary to look fixedly at a dial, even for a brief period. This produces an after-image on the retina of his eye, which will seem to be projected on the sky when he looks up again. He could easily mistake a dial for a disc.

Senate Group OK's Tax Cut Bill

House Measure Approved 10-3

WASHINGTON, July 9 (U. P.).—The senate finance committee voted 10 to 3 today to approve the house-passed Republican tax reduction bill now in its second trip through congress.

The committee quickly approved the measure in a session lasting less than an hour.

The three dissenting votes to the bill—passed by the house yesterday—were cast by Senate Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, Democratic Whip Scott W. Lucas of Illinois and Senator Tom Connally (D. Tex.).

Offers Substitute Bill

Before the final vote, Mr. Lucas offered a substitute bill which proposed greater relief for the lower income brackets than the Republican bill. It was rejected by the same 10 to 3 lineup.

The Republican bill, which the house approved by a vote of 302 to 112, calls for personal income tax cuts ranging from 30 per cent for individuals earning taxable income up to $1000 down to 10.5 per cent for those earning more than $302,400.

The bill would be effective next Jan. 1.

The Lucas substitute would have raised the present personal exemption from $500 to $650 and reduced the present tax rates. It would cost the treasury about $4,600,000,000 compared with about $4 billion for the Republican-sponsored bill.

Vote With Committee

Three Democrats voted with the seven committee Republicans to approve the Republican bill. They were Senators Walter F. George (Georgia), Harry F. Byrd (Virginia), and Edwin C. Johnson (Colorado).

The house okayed the legislation yesterday by a vote of 302 to 112—26 votes more than the two-thirds majority necessary to override an anticipated veto.

School Coal Bids Show 39c Jump

The city school system today faced an increase in coal prices. Officials also sought a means of heating three schools which use fuel oil.

With only one bid offered for supplying more than 26,000 tons of coal, School Business Director Maxwell V. Bailey revealed that the per ton cost was 39 cents above last year's figure.

He said coal dealers asserted recent coal strikes might force costs as much as 50 cents higher.

No Bids on Oil

No bid has been submitted for fuel for the three schools which use oil.

The school board last night accepted the resignation of John E. McCaughey, buildings and grounds superintendent for the last six years. Mr. McCaughey said he would re-enter the construction business.

New teacher appointments approved by the board last night were: Constance M. Bey, Marianne Buschmann, Geneva M. Cuddy, Ruth M. Graham, Cecil Haven, Phyllis C. Hoover, Emmett L. Lunsford, Barbara A. Martin and Sylvester L. Persyck.

Amateur 'Sleuth' Lands in Toils

Said He Was on 'Big Murder Here'

The case of a Brazil, Ind. ex-farmland arrested downtown last night after he said he was probing a "big North side strange murder," fascinated Indianapolis detectives today.

They thought the self-styled "private eye," who was carrying a special deputy sheriff's badge, a knife and a revolver, might be able to give them some clues on happenings about town.

Detectives identified the amateur sleuth as Lester Lloyd Winn, 27, of 1221 Bellefontaine st. He also gave them a Brazil rural route address.

He Was Well Armed

Specifically, they were interested in knowing what he was doing standing at the corner of Market st. and Capitol ave. at 10 p. m. armed with a .32-caliber revolver, a sheathed hunting knife at his belt and the special deputy's badge in his pocket.

The existence of the special deputy's badge wasn't much of a mystery. There are more than a hundred of them about town.

Where the ex-farmland got it, however, was the question. The armament added up to charges of carrying concealed weapons and violation of the 1935 firearms act.

Police said Winn had been telling all about the big "North Side Murder." His audience was Albert R. Farr, 35, of Martinsville, who works in the Terminal lunch room at 128 W. Market st.

Call For Police

After Winn described now he was ferreting out clues in the grisly case as a special operative, Mr. Farr decided the police ought to know about the help they were getting. He called them.

Sgt. Charles Crouch's squad found Winn standing on the corner of Market and Capitol observing the state house. He was watching its every movement.

When Sgt. Crouch asked him what was up, the midsummer sleuth turned pale and fainted dead away, his weapons and his badge clattering on the sidewalk. The police squad revived him and took him to headquarters to meet several other detectives.

There wasn't any "big North Side strange murder" last night, according to police who usually hear about such incidents in one way or another.
