

FTC Charges Illegal 'Fix' In Steel Price

Alleges Industry Killed Competition

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18 (U.P.)—The government today launched its first concrete move against high prices by charging that the iron and steel industry, basis of the nation's whole economy, engaged in illegal collusive practices to raise, fix and maintain prices.

The government brought its charge against the American Iron and Steel Institute and its 100 odd members. They comprise virtually all of the industry.

The complaint issued by the federal trade commission charged that the institute, by working to fix identical prices among members, destroyed competition and was unfair and discriminatory to steel consumers. It also charged that the industry's pricing system prohibited members from cutting prices.

Dominates Market

Evidence that the iron and steel producers dominated, controlled and manipulated the market collectively through the institute was shown, the government said, by the steel price rise in July.

"Producers collectively supported that increase through the officers of the institute," the complaint said. "Representative producers have announced that the increase aggregated hundreds of millions of dollars."

Noncompetitive prices are set, the FTC said, by a system which produces "matching" delivered price quotations to all purchasers "as though all mills were under one ownership and control."

The commission charged that these practices violated the federal trade commission act, which forbids unfair methods of competition. The justice department, which has begun an investigation to determine whether there is any conspiracy to maintain or raise prices, was not involved in this action.

Army Officer Since 1942 Finally Paid—and Promoted

Sworn in During Philippine Battle but Never Had Dog Tag, Later Served on Leyte

BERKELEY, Cal., Aug. 18 (U.P.)—Lt. Col. Lewis F. Schroeder, 60-year-old former coconut plantation operator, was notified today that he stands to receive about $25,000 for his army service in world war II.

Col. Schroeder, a lieutenant in the first world war, was commissioned during the battle for Malabang airfield, April 29, 1942. He was familiar with the terrain and officers swore him in on the spot without notifying Washington.

With the fall of Mindanao, Col. Schroeder surrendered himself and the 81st Filipino division. He was taken to Bukidna, Mindanao.

A Japanese officer, finding no army identification on Col. Schroeder, ordered him sent to a civilian prison camp. This probably saved his life, since he was spared the floggings of a military camp.

After being transferred to Santo Tomas at Manila and then to Los Banos, Col. Schroeder was freed on Feb. 23, 1945, by American paratroopers.

He joined the staff of the 8th war I.

army corps on Leyte and participated in several assault operations.

Meanwhile, the officer who inducted him on Mindanao three years before had died and the army could not decide whether Col. Schroeder was really a major.

Last week the army finally decided Col. Schroeder was an officer and proceeded to promote him to lieutenant colonel on inactive duty. His back pay will total almost $25,000.

The army also gave him the same serial number he carried in world war I.

Mr. Viskas was killed and Mr. Latello lost his left leg in the accident. Both were cut severely by the boat's propeller.

Five neighbors appeared before the board declaring that the area around the proposed tavern site was more than 80 per cent residential, and announced they would obtain signatures from more than a majority of residents in that area against the tavern.

vote of residents living within a radius of 500 feet of the proposed

Judges Swamped With Week's Entries

By ART WRIGHT
Times Photo Contest judges, "swamped under" with entries for the second week's award, promised today that they would announce the winner in Wednesday's Times.

The best photo of the week earns $5 for the amateur picture-snapper. Even if you don't win the top prize, your picture might be published in The Times as an honorable mention.

Contest Ends Friday

Pictures now being received will be judged in the third week contest which closes at midnight Friday. Your entry must be brought to The Times or postmarked by that time. Entries received after that time will be eligible for the fourth week.

Your photograph may be of any subject. Why not try some unique poses of the children in the family in some "cute" antics. The unusual has the better chance to win. The pictures are judged for their eye-appeal. Ingenuity might even out over photographic excellence.

There are no fees of any kind for entry. The only restriction is that the photographer must be an amateur. An amateur is one whose chief source of income is not derived from photographic work.

It was the second time in recent weeks that the Soviet embassy has been subjected to indignities.

Hope for Envoy To Japan Is Dim

Gen. MacArthur Aide Believed Crash Victim

HONOLULU, Aug. 18 (U.P.)—Hope that George C. Atcheson Jr., Gen. Douglas MacArthur's political adviser and allied council chairman, was still alive dwindled to the "extremely remote" point today more than 24 hours after his B-17 plunged into the Pacific ocean.

Apparently 10 of the 13 men aboard perished when the converted bomber ran out of gasoline en route from Tokyo only a few minutes flying time from Hawaii. Three survivors were brought to Pearl Harbor by naval rescuers.

One survivor said: Mr. Atcheson gripped the sides of his seat a moment before the midnight crash and said quietly, "Well, it can't be helped."

Mr. Atcheson was flying to Washington in a plane from Gen. MacArthur's headquarters to discuss plans for a Japanese peace treaty.

Search units were ordered to watch for highly confidential documents he apparently was carrying.

Little Hope Seen

Capt. Roy A. Gano, commanding the searching destroyers, said there was little likelihood that any of the missing men would be found alive.

Air transport command officials questioned the survivors in an unsuccessful effort to learn why the pilot did not refuel at Johnson island
