Navy to Dissolve Secret Society

WASHINGTON, Sept. 2 (U. P.).—The Green Bowl, Annapolis naval academy secret society allegedly devoted to helping members up the navy's professional ladder, is headed for extinction.

The society was founded 40 years ago as a drinking club. Navy investigators headed by Rear Adm. Frank J. Lowry began inquiring into its activities in July after

Capt. John G. Crommelin, famous navy flier, testified before a house committee that the bowl was an "innocently started society grown vicious with the years." Lowry is expected to deliver his final report late this month and will recommend that the bowl be dissolved "because there is no place in the navy for any secret society." He is expected to state, however, that there are no grounds for Capt. Crommelin's assertion that it was a secret mutual-help club.
