

Husband Arrested After Home Row

Taken After Chase Through Streets

A wild automobile chase over West side Indianapolis ended with the arrest of Earl Anderson, 22, of 2305 E. 25th st. yesterday.

The arrest grew out of difficulties between Anderson and his wife, Betty Anderson, 325 N. Gable st., early Sunday.

Police were called to the Anderson residence Saturday night by Mrs. Anderson, who told them her husband had beaten her. After quieting the disturbance, police left, but were called back at 1 a. m. by neighbors. They said Anderson was driving up and down the street in a reckless manner and sounding his horn and flashing a spotlight.

Police parked near the home, soon they saw a car drive south on Gable. In front of Mrs. Anderson's home the driver fired a shot which struck the porch about three feet from Mrs. Anderson.

The car sped on. As the police car swung into pursuit it went faster. Police overtook the car on White River blvd. Anderson was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct, reckless driving and vagrancy. Officers confiscated a .22 rifle.

RANK REGION—The shaggy growth of weeds on this corner lot at N. Delaware and 14th sts. has drawn repeated complaints from nearby property owners yet the area remains uncut. Residents say dogs fight and shady characters lurk in the high grass. It mars the beauty of an otherwise picturesque street.

Numerous Protests to City Officials Fail to Get Patch of Weeds Cut

Residents of Delaware and 14th Sts. Report Plot Hideout for Dogs, Shady Characters

By The Times Civic Reporter

A waving patch of high grass and weeds on the southwest corner of Delaware and 14th sts., drew the ire of neighbors this morning.

Residents around the area were at wits end trying to get the patch cut. Their numerous calls to city officials have brought only promises and excuses and no mowing machines.

Today as the weeds grow taller and begin to turn brown those living nearby are becoming fearful that fire might start in the patch and spread to their homes.

The high grass overhangs the sidewalks, forcing pedestrians to walk in the street. At night, so neighbors say, vicious acting dogs romp and fight in the rank growth and shady characters are seen to emerge from the patch.

G. G. Miller, piano salesman living at 1421 N. Delaware st., declared he had seen a taxi driver give liquor to teen-agers on the corner and the youths take it into the weeds.

"I called the health department in an attempt to get the weeds cut," Mr. Miller said, "but they told me their budget was so low it was impossible for them to do anything about it."

He said in another call to city hall he was told to contact the street commissioner branch office at Shelby st.

"All I got was another story about a low budget," he said. "When I complained that I thought I should get more service out of my increased taxes the man to whom I was speaking laughed and hung up."

Mrs. E. O. Edwards, housekeeper living at 1407-N. Delaware st., declared, "It's a disgrace to the neighborhood."

"We had the same trouble last year," she explained, "and the weeds weren't cut until late in the fall when they had turned brown and dry. I suppose it will be the same again this year."

She said she called the park department a month ago and a man came out and looked over the patch.

"When he left he promised me something would be done," Mrs. Edwards said, "but that was a month ago and no one has returned."

Meanwhile, the weeds continue to wave in the breeze, causing an eyesore on one of the city's most picturesque streets.

Suit to Decide Who May Vote

Circuit Court to Rule On City Election

A law suit to untangle some legal technicalities regarding the right of residents in newly-annexed city areas to cast ballots in the Nov. 4 election was agreed on by county officials today.

In several areas recently annexed to the city the boundaries cut through the middle of some precincts. In order to clarify the voting status of residents in these areas for the city election the county election board and county commissioners agreed to be defendants in a friendly suit to be brought by residents in these new areas.

The new city residents will bring a petition before the election board. This action will form the basis for a suit to be brought by Scott G. G. county attorney, for a mandate order in circuit court, clarifying the right of annexed voters to cast their ballot.

Last week the county election board ruled that all annexed residents would be permitted to vote Nov. 4.

Holdup Fear Shuts Gambling Spots

Holiday Declared After Tipoff

Times State Service

JEFFERSONVILLE, Sept. 8. — Jeffersonville's one-day gambling shutdown resulted from fear of a holdup, gambling sources said here today.

The city's gambling spots closed Friday after several operators were tipped off about a holdup plot, an informant said. Rather than risk a disturbance, the gambling cars declared a holiday.

On Saturday night, gaming rooms again were wide open here, with dice and roulette among the main attractions. The operators were hopeful of a business pickup because of a gaming crackdown over the week-end in Louisville, Ky., across the Ohio river.
