12 States Tighten Child Labor Laws

WASHINGTON (UP)—The Labor Department reports that 1947 legislation "strengthened" the child labor laws in 12 states and "lowered" the standards in three others.

The department said in a survey that "the results were below expectations."

Alabama became the 18th state to establish a basic 16-year minimum for employment of minors and the Illinois law of 1945 fixing that minimum became effective last June 30.

The department said states which strengthened child labor laws were Alabama, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Ohio, Michigan, New Jersey, Minnesota, Maine, North Dakota, Wisconsin and Hawaii.

Standards were lowered in Florida, Pennsylvania and Texas. Also included in the latter group because of relaxations were several states which had improved some parts of their laws. They included Ohio, Massachusetts and Michigan.

Compulsory school attendance laws were made stronger in Maryland, Michigan and Tennessee, the department said.
