

Ask Mrs. Manners—

What to Do About a Jealous Husband . . . ?

Dear Mrs. Manners:

I DON'T KNOW if you can help me or not. I have been married five years and have a small child. My husband works a shift where we can't go out. When he worked the other shift he still didn't take me anywhere. We went out a lot before we were married but while he was in service he changed. He didn't trust me at all and then when he came home he thought I did everything "under the sun" wrong. I didn't—and when I try to tell him he gets mad.

I stay home all the time and if I suggest going anywhere he gets mad. So one evening I went out with three of my girl friends—which I don't have any more. When we got home my husband ordered them out and then beat me.

I love my husband but a person can take just so much—and that's what he's been told. I'm not a bad-looking girl. I'm not even in my 20's—and my husband is just in his. I have tried leaving him but he's always come after me and says if I don't come back to him he will follow me and disgrace me in the face and body so no one will want me.

A READER.

Because you've been unsuccessful in reasoning with a jealous husband—and maybe a sick husband—try to persuade him to go to the doctor. Suggest that you're concerned about his health—check yours at the same time. In the meantime, talk confidentially with the doctor who can make tactful suggestions to him.

Many GIs mistrusted wives who were true to them. It's understandable—they wanted someone to believe in but they had only letters to substantiate their belief. I've often thought that wives, zealous in trying to convince servicemen of their faithfulness, should have omitted accounts of their harmless social activities. The GI husbands were missing being "missed"—most of them wanted to hear how lonely their wives were—lonely but brave. Many wives, proud of the good jobs they landed, were disappointed at their husbands' lack of enthusiasm—the GIs weren't thinking about salaries—they were thinking about home and being wanted.

Hold your temper and ignore arguments. Go out of your way to show your husband that you love him—that you want to go out with him. You do need recreation. Be as agreeable as you were when single when out with your husband. You can't help "looking" married, but you can look happily married.

Seeks Advice on Paintings

I AM A girl 17 and am an artist. I have several paintings. I'm not so good on landscapes but I do very well on faces and figures. I would like to know where and how to sell them.

M. M.

You need to popularize your name, as well as your work. Ask H. Lieber Co. art gallery directors to display your work in the store's third floor hobby and amateur show. If your paintings are suitable, a sign with your name, address and telephone number will be placed in Lieber's windows, announcing that you offer a display. Conducting home or studio exhibits is expensive.

You could advertise or contact private art patrons and seek to become their protege.

Homesteading in Alaska

I WOULD like to know if Mrs. Jean Chapple is the lady from whom I could get some information concerning homesteading in Alaska, etc.

C. H. W., Burns City.

Direct your inquiry to the U. S. Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Chapple's address was given to a person wishing information on foreign jobs.

Thrown Out of My Father's Home'

MY FATHER threw me out of his home for two of his "supposed to be" best friends. My husband and I were divorced. There was no place for me and my two children to go so I turned to my ex-husband.

He said to bring them to his mother's and stay, and we would get married, so I did. But every week he put it off. Because I didn't have anywhere to go I was forced to live with him, not married.

We went to town and spent our $15 on Christmas presents for the "kids." Then he gave me a beating, when we argued, and I fought back. He and his mother told me to take the "kids" and get out. I had no place to take the "kids"—so I am staying with my mother. She can't keep me—she has no money and is taking a chance on being thrown out of her home by letting us stay with her.

My ex-husband isn't giving me any money as he said that if I go to court I'll lose the children for living with him unmarried. Can you tell me what I can do?

L. M. G.

Consult a lawyer regarding your rights.

Either remarry and get along, or figure out a way to support and house your children single. If you remarry your ex-husband, remember that a bargain is struck by two or more persons and an argument also requires more than one person. When you feel like fighting, think of the children whom you owe a peaceful life.

Details Promised on 'Miss Universe'

ON NOV. 24 The Times printed an article on Page 24 by Virginia MacPherson concerning the crowning of "Miss Universe." Is there really to be such a contest? Who is eligible?

When and where is the next "Mrs. America" beauty contest?

A CONSTANT READER.

The Miss Universe contest will get under way on a world-wide basis in late summer. I'll publish details when they arrive.

Mrs. America, Inc., contest headquarters promised to inform me when the site and date for the 1948 contest are named and I'll publish them in the column.

Let Mrs. Manners and readers of the column share your problems and answer your questions. Write in care of The Times, 214 W. Maryland St.

Colleagues Hail 'Printer' Jenner

Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7—Congressional colleagues and members of the press and radio galleries were congratulating Sen. William E. Jenner (R. Ind.) today on doing an unprecedented job as Chairman of the Joint Committee on Printing.

For the first time in decades the new Congressional Directory for the 2d session of the 80th Congress was distributed on opening day. Usually such directories come out about the time Congress is ready to quit. But under Sen. Jenner's direction the whole government printing business has been given a better time schedule.

Also the Congressional Record has been made more intelligible through the addition of an appendix which tells briefly what each house of Congress did that day, including committees, and lists the progress for the immediate future. This also has been added under the Jenner chairmanship.
