Fur Farmers Make Headway With Loan Plea

Plight of 900 Getting Congress' Attention

By EARL RICHERT

Scripture-Herald Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The congressional "fur bloc" is making progress in its attempt to keep 900 fox farmers in business by loaning them on a long-term basis up to $5 million from the U. S. Treasury.

Bill authorizing the Agriculture Department to make these loans already have been approved by the Republican-controlled Senate and House agriculture committees.

The Senate bill is ready for consideration but the House bill is still before the rules committee where it is being opposed by Rep. James Wadsworth (R. N. Y.).

Sees Dangerous Precedent

"I think these loans would establish a dangerous precedent," said Rep. Wadsworth. "It would mean that any time any industry got in trouble it would come running to the government and get it to pay its losses."

He said he had supported the wartime loan and subsidy programs to spur production of products needed in the national interest.

But the fur industry was not regarded as necessary in wartime and it certainly is not now," he said. "Silver-fox furs can scarcely be called a necessity."

Sen. Harlan Bushfield (R. S. D.), who voted against the bill in the Senate Agriculture Committee, said that any industry that had been losing ground as rapidly as the domestic fox industry did not seem to him to merit loans of up to $5 million from the government.

Fur Farms Decreasing

The number of silver fox farms in the U. S. has decreased from 3000 before the war to about 900 today.

The industry has been hard hit by a fashion trend away from silver fox. Industry spokesmen blame the importation of foreign short-haired furs. They say foreign governments, including Russia, have been dumping furs here to get much-needed dollars.

Principal supporters of the fox-loan bills are from Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin. Republican Sen. Edward Thye of Minnesota and Homer Ferguson of Michigan are authors of the Senate bill.

Legion Housing Group To Meet PHA Director

The American Legion sub-committee on veterans' housing will attend a meeting with Orville Olmstead, director of the Public Housing Authority District 3, tomorrow in Chicago.

Mr. Olmstead has asked for the conference between the Legion committee and the purchasers of the Knox housing project as a result of the Legion's protest to the Indiana congressional delegation last week. The American Legion has announced its intention to make every effort to see that the houses at Knox are actually sold to veterans.
