Ruling Sought on Labor Law Clause

District Judge Here To Make Decision

Federal District Judge Luther M. Swygert studied opposing arguments today on whether the Taft-Hartley law violates the constitution by permitting the National Labor Relations Board to obtain injunctions against unions.

The law was challenged yesterday by the AFL International Typographical Union. The ITU asked Swygert to dismiss, on those grounds, an NLRB petition for an injunction to prohibit the union from engaging in certain alleged unfair labor practices against newspaper publishers.

More than 1700 ITU members are on strike against 14 newspapers, eight of them in the Chicago area. The NLRB claims the union struck to force the papers to accept its conditions of employment rather than sign a formal labor contract. The union claims the strikes were called to enforce wage demands.

Swygert took the constitutionality question under advisement, possibly for as long as two weeks.

If he agrees with the ITU that the Taft-Hartley clause is unconstitutional, the NLRB's suit automatically will be tossed out of court. If he refuses the ITU motion, however, attorneys for the union and board will commence arguments on the NLRB's injunction petition.

Swygert gave the attorneys for the union and board—plus counsellors for seven labor unions and newspaper association which have intervened in the case—until next Monday to file briefs for and against the injunction request.

He said he would not resume hearings until at least one week after he rules on the dismissal motion.

Gandhi's Ashes Are Borne By 'Temple on Wheels'

Thousands Pay Homage to Train on 400-Mile Trip to Watery Junction at Allahabad

By JAMES MICHAELS, United Press Staff Correspondent
ABOARD THE GANDHI FUNERAL TRAIN, Feb. 11—A third class railway carriage transformed into a temple on wheels, rolled north toward the sacred city of Allahabad today bearing the bones and ashes of Mohandas K. Gandhi, India's martyred saint.

The train is carrying Mr. Gandhi's earthly remains to the junction of the Holy Ganges and Jumna Rivers at Allahabad, where, in keeping with Hindu custom, they will be mixed with the waters to float away into time.

The people of India are paying holy homage to this train as though Mr. Gandhi was alive and would soon come out and speak to them.

The peasants recognize the train as it rolls through the countryside. They stand in their fields and in their mud thatched villages along the railroad line, folding their hands before their face.

To western eyes, this gesture is one of prayer, to the Hindu it is a sign of paying respects.

They shout "victory to Gandhi" as the train rolls by, carrying their sainted leader's ashes and bones in a brass urn in the middle carriage of the train.

Mr. Gandhi's sons and granddaughters, shrouded in cloaks, kneel or sit in a circle about the altar as they will do throughout the journey. They chant ancient hymns and scriptures.

It will take the train 26 hours to cover something less than 400 miles.

Yank Dead, 20 Hurt In Mock Battle

Oceanside, Cal., Feb. 11 (UP)—One Marine was dead, another missing and 20 others injured today after five amphibious tractors capsized in the Pacific Ocean surf and turned a mock battle into a tragedy.

The tractors turned over in wind-lashed seas during landing maneuvers yesterday.

Some of the 17 craft launched in the maneuvers made the beach safely. A few returned to the mother ship despite boiling seas and mountainous surf. Others reached San Diego with larger ships breaking water for them.

Cpl. Sterling E. Dalley, 19, Austin, Tex., was killed in the operation. Four men were hospitalized, one seriously hurt. At least 16 other Marines were treated for minor injuries and released, the Marine Corps said.
