

LaMarre Explains Why He Turned Accuser Of Gen. Meyers

Tells U. S. Jury
Moral Outlook
Was Changed

Defense Hints at Shakedown Attempt

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2 (UPI)—Bierot H. LaMarre testified today that he turned accuser of Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers because of a change in his "moral outlook."

Mr. LaMarre is under cross-examination in the trial of Gen. Meyers, No. 2 wartime Air Force procurement officer. The government contends that Gen. Meyers persuaded Mr. LaMarre to lie to conceal the general's profitable wartime operation of the aviation Electric Corp., which he says Gen. Meyers directed.

Changed Outlook

He said he decided to "tell the truth" after talking with his Dayton, O., attorney, Mr. LaMarre first told Senate investigators Gen. Meyers had no connection with the firm, then changed his story.

Gen. Meyers' chief counsel, Robert T. Bushnell, asked if the talk with the Dayton attorney resulted in a "moral rejuvenation" of Mr. LaMarre.

"You might call it that," Mr. LaMarre said. Mr. Bushnell asked if the conversation "changed your whole moral outlook."

"It did," Mr. LaMarre replied. Earlier Gen. Meyers was pictured by his attorney today as a victim of the old confidence game.

The first indication of the strategy by which the defense hopes to clear the retired general of a charge of subversion of power.

In his questioning Mr. Bushnell suggested that Mr. LaMarre and his wife, Mildred, had taken Gen. Meyers for all the money they could get.

When the general refused to pay any more, Mr. Bushnell implied, the LaMars made up a phony story about the big wartime profits which they say Gen. Meyers got from Aviation Electric Corp., Vandals, O.

Protest to Truman In Dooming of Trio

The Indianapolis Committee of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People today protested to President Truman the death sentence given three Georgia Negroes recently.

Telegrams sent to the President, Attorney General Tom Clark and the Governor of Georgia described the death sentences as "a flagrant violation of civil rights."

The Rev. Clarence T. R. Nelson, secretary of the education board of the Methodist Church here, said the local committee found that the three Negroes, a mother and her two sons, were convicted on evidence that they acted in self-defense in connection with the slaying of a Georgia farmer.

The three Negroes, he said, had been given a temporary stay of execution.

The Rev. Mr. Nelson said a mass meeting has been called for Mar. 12 at the Simpson Methodist Church here to raise money to defend the trio in further litigation.

Baby Born, Rent Hiked; Judge to Decide Case

NEW YORK, Mar. 2 (UPI)—Municipal Court Justice Charles H. Breithart said today that a federal rent control provision allowing rent increases for an increase in a tenant's family may encourage birth control.

Judge Breithart reserved a decision on a case in which a Brooklyn landlord raised his tenant's rent $4 a month because a baby was born to the family. The judge said he would write an opinion on the matter because he was concerned with "a penalty on babies."

Harvey Plans Fight Against U. S. School Aid

Opposes 'Bureaucrats' Dictating to State

By DANIEL M. KIDNEY
Times Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Mar. 2 (UPI)—As chairman of the state budget committee, Rep. Ralph Harvey (R. Ind.) helped get salary increases for Indiana teachers through increased state aid for schools.

As a member of the Indiana legislature, he also joined in passing the resolution condemning appeals for federal funds and putting "on record as being willing to pay its own way."

That legislative resolution was sent to all Senators and Congressmen by Gov. Ralph Gates. And it is to that resolution Mr. Harvey intends to adhere when and if the $300 million federal aid for education bill comes up for a vote in the House, he said today.

To Oppose U. S. Aid

"I intend to vote against federal aid for our primary schools," Mr. Harvey explained, "because no matter how the bill is drafted there will be dictation from Washington, eventually, if Uncle Sam pays the bills."

That is true of the various federal aid programs already voted and it will be true in this case. The only place I would care to consider federal aid would be for secondary schools. That is for the college level, where states have difficulty financing first-class institutions, particularly in specialized and post-graduate fields."

Mr. Harvey, a large-scale farmer, is a graduate of Purdue.

Executive Secretary Robert H. Wyatt's 24,000-member Indiana State Teachers' Association has told Mr. Harvey know the teachers do not like his anti-federal aid stand. They are for it. Mr. Wyatt spends considerable time here helping the National Education Association put it over. The NEA is the largest teacher lobby in the world.

Answers Constituents

Mr. Harvey has written replies to as many of his 10th district constituents as have asked about the matter. His letter sets forth his reasons for opposing the federal aid bill.

Briefly it boils down to this:

"I do not want Washington bureaucrats telling us Hoosiers how to run our schools."

Control System Speeds Repairs

There's something new and different in auto repair service at 11th and Meridian Sts.

If Monarch Buick repair department is filled up for the day, they won't ask you to put your car in "cold storage" until they can get at it. A new control tower system keeps work moving through the shop at an even capacity rate, virtually eliminating chance for unexpected delay.

The control tower directs every activity of 40 trained mechanics, knows what is taking place in every department on the 140,000 square feet of garage floor at all times.

Has Choice

When a car comes in a service engineer diagnoses the trouble, sends a report by pneumatic tube to the tower, and knows quickly how soon the car can start through the line, how long it will take.

The motorist has the option of waiting in a well-appointed waiting room if the job is a short one or using the quarter-hourly courtesy car service to ride downtown to his business.

Controlled service, according to Monarch President William R. Kraft is Monarch's answer to increasing demand for faster and more convenient repair service.

The new plans would eliminate a driveway from the Illinois St. side across from the park.
