Teen Topics—Give Your Date Chances To Be Polite

By JEAN WE LIKE neat definitions. Here's our latest: A lady is a woman who makes a man feel like a gentleman.

Um-hum, gals, it's so right. The men of your life can't show their true colors unless you give them a chance.

Even in little things like opening doors for you! Stand aside and let him play like Adolphe Menjou, smooth and elegant.

Politeness is a two-way proposition. And so are social situations. When you have a Saturday date with your everyday sweetheart, what goes?

A session of slumming around town ending with a smooching party? You have only yourself to blame!

YES, HONEST! If you act as if "anything goes"—it sure will.

Maybe you're afraid you'll be unpopular if you shy away from hot spots and refuse to play woo-woo. Well, yes, if you're dealing with a professional wolf, he'll likely drop you like a hot cake.

Most boys, however, crave feminine companionship for its own sake. If your date really likes you, he'll go for cheerful chatter, snazzy stepping and good, clean fun.

opening lead of the ace of hearts, West shifted to the eight of spades. East went up with queen, declarer won with the ace and cashed the jack.

South then proceeded to get himself down to the nine of spades, jack of hearts and seven of diamonds. West was left with the jack and four of diamonds and nine of clubs. Dummy held the ace and nine of diamonds and three of clubs.

While East had the queen of hearts and queen-10 of diamonds.

O'Brien led the last spade. West could not throw away this spot would become good. When he let go a diamond, declarer discarded the club from dummy, and East was squeezed.

He had to hold the queen of hearts or O'Brien's jack would be good. When he let go a diamond, O'Brien won the last two tricks with the ace and nine of diamonds in dummy.

This hand also employs a very interesting cross-ruff.

O'Brien made the hand by a triple squeeze. After the
