Why Not Do This?

By ERNEST G. OSBORNE

His Own Drawer: Every young child is fascinated by the things he sees in drawers of his mother's bureau or his father's desk. Indeed, while the youngster is toddling around this fascination is one of the hazards to housekeeping.

He is almost sure to dig into what seems to him a treasure trove. And it is very hard to keep from being cross with him for an activity that in itself shows intellectual curiosity and a desirable attitude of exploration.

Let him have the lowest drawer in the desk or bureau for himself and have papers like Daddy, a pencil or two, or some small pieces of cloth that make him feel he has clothes like those in mother's bureau. He will usually be quite content and not disturb anything in the other drawers.

Beer Drinker Reveals 'Pay or Burns' Game

MONTREAL, Apr. 9 (UPI)—Gabriel Baynham explained cigarette burns on his hands to city detectives by describing a unique beer-drinking practice called "pay or burns."

Baynham, who pleaded guilty to a charge of armed robbery, said a group of his friends had a mutual agreement that when one did not want to pay for a round of beer he burned his hands with a cigarette.

"I seldom pay," Baynham boasted.
