Crump Branded 'Czar' For Challenging Editor To Get Out of Town

Scripps-Howard Supported Candidate For Senate; Says Political Boss Acts Like Stalin

MEMPHIS, July 8.—Rep. Estes Kefauver (D. Tenn.), candidate for U. S. Senator from Tennessee, branded as a sign of dictatorship a suggestion by E. H. Crump, political boss, that either he (Mr. Crump) or a newspaper editor leave town.

Mr. Crump in a speech, which he had the machine mayor of Memphis, James J. Plessants, make for him over 11 radio stations in Memphis and west Tennessee yesterday, challenged Edward J. Meeman, editor of the Memphis Press-Scimitar, a Scripps-Howard newspaper, to disprove charges made by Mr. Crump against Rep. Kefauver.

Hoosier GOP Calls Strategy Parley

Conclave Set Sunday At Tippecanoe Lake

Candidates on the Republican state ticket will meet Sunday at Tippecanoe Lake in northern Indiana to organize their strategy committee for the coming campaign.

The traditional biennial session was called by state Chairman Clark Springer and the candidates will be the guests of Hobart Creighton of Warsaw, GOP nominee for governor.

The conclusion put forward by Mr. Crump on the basis of this comparison of votes was that Mr. Kefauver like Mr. Marcanonio, was sympathetic with Communists.

Both Mr. Kefauver and the Press-Scimitar previously had pointed out that many Democrats, including House and Senate leaders, also had voted the same way as the New Yorker on many measures.

Mr. Kefauver said the Democratic House leadership had voted like Mr. Marcanonio more frequently than he had.

In his radio broadcasts Mr. Crump proposed that "the Chamber of Commerce or committee of body appoint a committee of seven, composed of either clergymen, businessmen, labor, women or professional men, to go into the charges I have made against Kefauver's record... probe them to the bottom." If Meeman can prove through any reliable committee selected that these charges are false, I will get my hat and leave Memphis, never to return. On the other hand, if he cannot disprove these charges, then he will leave Memphis, never to return."

Mr. Kefauver, campaigning in west Tennessee, heard Mr. Crump's broadcast and immediately wired Mr. Meeman, taking over the Crump challenge and making a counter-proposal:

"I am willing to submit to the committee which he (Crump) suggests. However, Crump is not a candidate for the Senate. Neither are you. I am a candidate. So is John Mitchell. I have not depended on any mouthpiece in my campaign. Thus far, John Mitchell has largely relied on Crump to speak for him."

"I am the best man to present my record to any group. John Mitchell, if he thinks he can represent the people of Tennessee in the Senate, should be the best man to challenge it. Therefore, let us have this hearing—of course, with John Mitchell and me appearing."

"Whatever the results, I do not want E. H. Crump to take my family and move from Memphis, nor do I want you to leave. It is a dictatorship, indeed, that cannot tolerate two men of different opinions. That's Joe Stalin's way, but it is not my way."

In making public Mr. Kefauver's telegram, Mr. Meeman said: "The fantastic broadcast which E. H. Crump had made over 11 radio stations shows Crump's desperate fear that Kefauver will be elected over his opponent as was that other great Tennesseean, Cordell Hull, in 1930."

Mr. Meeman agreed with that part of Mr. Crump's broadcast which said Memphis is a "great and growing city that is getting better every day," but he added: "The building of Memphis is the work of all its citizens. The Press-Scimitar is proud of the part it has played in the progress of Memphis."

As to communism, Mr. Meeman said: "Readers of the Press-Scimitar will recall the many articles. I have written exposing communist's false claims and pointing out the menace of the Reds in foreign countries and at home to the safety of America. I was one of the first editors to see this danger."

"There are those who believe that these articles of mine, printed from coast to coast in the Scripps-Howard newspapers, including such important centers of opinion as Washington and New York, were one of the fac-

Factionalism Over Truman Shatters Unity

City Bosses Likely To Pull Punches

By CHARLES T. LUCEY

WASHINGTON, July 8.—The clashing and gouging between pro-Truman and pro-Eisenhower factions seemed sure today to leave the Democratic party so shattered as to cripple its presidential campaign.

That goes, regardless of who is nominated next week at Philadelphia—and the odds are back on Harry Truman again.

But nominee Truman is likely to get little comfort from any of the three party factions which have been trying to defeat him—the Solid South, the big city bosses of the North and the old New Dealers.

If the Philadelphia convention next week does trample on the President and turn to someone else, that someone—Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas or whoever—is sure to be hurt by continuing intra-party crossfire.

Hostile Bed Fellows

In terms of issues and principles, there is no reconciling some of the forces vociferous in trying to draft Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. Those who follow the Roosevelt New Deal pattern, such as Leon Henderson of the Americans for Democratic Action and James Roosevelt, Democratic national committeeman for California, have no bond with the conservative Southern Democrats.

The southerners are bitter against the President because of his civil liberties program, but the so-called liberal wing wants this program to go into the new Democratic platform. Yet both these groups joined hands to try to batter down Mr. Truman.

City bosses such as Jacob M. Arvey of Chicago and Frank Hague of Jersey City, who plugged for Gen. Eisenhower, have one chief interest—to get someone at the head of the ticket to help them win or retain hold on the city halls and courthouses, with their thousands of patronage jobs.

Fear a Wreck

The hope of the city bosses and old New Dealers was that Gen. Eisenhower would say nothing. Even if he had said only that he stood on his January disavowal—without his "could not accept nomination" codicil—they would have taken it as a sign that he would yield to a draft. Now seasoned politicians say Mr. Truman's nomination seems most likely.

If Mr. Truman is nominated, neither the ADA nor the big-city bosses likely will do much to get him elected. National Democratic Chairman J. Howard McGrath voiced the concern of numerous leaders in his plea for unity behind Mr. Truman. They fear that if sniping at the President continues, the party as it stands today is on its way to being wrecked.

Aligned Against Jenner

It was possible, of course, that the candidates would get into the matter of the state chairmanship, but they would be helpless to act unless they could line up a majority of the state committee's 22 votes. Most of the candidates were aligned directly with the anti-Jenner faction in the recent state convention fight and share to some degree the desire to replace Mr. Springer.

Most prominently mentioned as possible successors to Mr. Springer are Walter Helmke of Ft. Wayne, another unsuccessful governor candidate, and Morris Creighton, former second district chairman who managed Mr. Creighton's pre-convention campaign.

Factors which aroused this country to the danger we faced from Communist trickery and aggression.

"An editor with these convictions and that record would not have come to the support of Estes Kefauver if he found any reason to believe that Estes Kefauver was not clear of any suspicion of Red sympathies and was not fully aware to the dangers of communism."

"As to this business of Crump or me leaving Memphis, I am not being sarcastic when I say that I know he has many friends here who would miss him. I do not know how many friends I have who would be sorry to see me go, but I do know that none of these friends fears I will suspect them of personal disloyalty to me if they happen to prefer some other candidate for the United States Senate over my choice."

Mr. Schneider said that his son, Benjamin, got the dog as a puppy three years ago. He fed it milk from a bottle. As the dog grew older, everywhere that Benjamin went, Queenie was sure to go. The dog, Mr. Schneider said, even slept on the foot of the boy's bed.

Lost Weight

However, five months ago Benjamin went to live with his brother at East Long Beach, Cal., so that he could go to school there.

Within a few days, Mr. Schneider said, Queenie began to lose weight. She refused to eat anything that was not forced down her throat with a spoon. The dog's weight dropped from 65 pounds to 40.

"I took Queenie to one veterinarian after another," Mr. Schneider said. "I spent $200 for treatments. They gave her penicillin and other drugs. But they didn't seem to do any good."

Listened Over Phone

A few days ago, Benjamin called up from California. The family held the telephone receiver to the dog's ear and Benjamin whistled and called to the dog. For the first time in weeks, the dog brightened up and barked.

"When I told the veterinarians about that," Mr. Schneider said, "they told me the dog was just heart broken, and dying from wanting to be with Ben. So I'm going to send Queenie out to California just as fast as the airlines can fly her."

Find 'Missing' IU Coed; Just Seeking Job, She Says

Turns Up at Pier To Claim Luggage

LONG BEACH, Cal., July 8.—An Indiana University coed who yesterday was reported as "missing" today showed up to get the luggage she had left Monday night with an attendant on Victory Pier.

Miss Ruth Ann Dykhuizen, 22, of Mendenhall, N. J., explained to police that she went to Catalina looking for a job and later found employment in a South Gate, Cal., cafe.

Police started a nation-wide search for the attractive coed after the attendant told police she had failed to return to claim two bags which she left as she came in on a water taxi from Santa Catalina Island.

Miss Dykhuizen was a June graduate from Indiana University, Bloomington, majoring in journalism.

Attendance so far this season at Indiana's state parks has jumped 25 per cent over the same period last year, when a new record was set, the Indiana State Department of Conservation said today.

State Parks Director Kenneth R. Coughlin said Hoosier parks "certainly are headed for another banner year." He said park admissions in 1947 totaled nearly $1,500,000.

Sheridan Norton, 44, who said he was "keeping score" wound up with the same charges as Potts. Young 'Nabbed' Again

Archie (Joker) Young, 68-year-old admittedly inveterate gambler fell a victim again yesterday to arrestists, which has afflicted him scores of times in his long career covering more than 35 years. He was charged with keeping a room for pool playing at 414 Indiana Ave.

Other relatives yesterday netted several others alleged to have been involved in baseball ticket operations.

Levi Imbler, 77, of 653 Massachusetts Ave., was charged with advertising and operating a lottery scheme and gift enterprise at the same address. Roy Dann, 36, of 48 W. St. Joseph St., was held on a charge of operating a lottery scheme and gift enterprise.

Lookout Awake, But Owner Isn't

The highly effective lookout system which is considered a "must" at city baseball ticket emporiums has a black mark against its still commendable record.

The machinery broke down last night when the operator of a "smoker" at 708 Massachusetts Ave. went across the street for a "short beer."

While he was gone, police moved into the establishment, looked around at the loafers and had a coke. In the coke machine was a bunch of baseball tickets suspended by a string.

Got No Response

Meanwhile, the suspected lookout, George W. Potts, 28, was doing his duty and announcing the visitors, but getting no response from Clayton Tate, 47, the alleged "boss man."

Sgt. John Sullivan found Tate quenching his thirst at the neglect of his business and charged him with keeping a gaming house, operating and advertising a lottery scheme and gift enterprise, and disorderly conduct. Potts was held on charges of aiding and abetting a lottery scheme and gift enterprise.

Crashes Stolen Car, Flees Shots

Driver Escapes Police In West Side Chase

A car thief eluded police early today after a wild chase on the West Side in which four shots were fired.

Police said they were cruising in the vicinity of 18th St. and U. S. 52, when they spotted a car which answered the description of one stolen about midnight from a grease rack in a filling station at 843 N. Capitol Ave.

The car was traveling south on U. S. 52 when police saw it. They wheeled their squad car around and began a chase which ended at 10th and Lynn Sts. when the fleeing car ran over the curb and crashed into a tree.

Skids Around Corner

With tires screaming, the car first skidded around the corner at 16th St. and U. S. 52 and headed west on 16th St.

Police were close behind as it lurched into Belle View Place and went south to 10th St. They fired a shot at the car as it sped east on 10th St.

When the driver attempted to turn the car into Lynn St., it bounced over the curb and smashed into a tree. Apparently unhurt, he leaped out and fled between two houses, dodging police bullets as he ran.

Cars Surround Scene

Night Police Capt. John Ambul rushed seven squad cars to the crash scene to search the area for the fugitive, whose only description was that he wore a light straw hat.

Police gave up the manhunt after a couple of hours, however.

In searching the car, which proved to be the one stolen, they found two pay telephones in the back seat.

The phones were traced to two filling stations on Prospect St. where they had been ripped from the walls during earlier burglaries last night.

Police said the car belonged to George Greene, 522 W. 25th St.
