Sheriff Pledges Safety Work

Opens Campaign For Re-election

Saving of lives through special safety patrol work and first-aid training will be the campaign theme of Sheriff Al Magenheimer, candidate for re-election on the Republican ticket.

In his opening campaign speech before the Wage Earners League, 38 N. Pennsylvania St., last night, Sheriff Magenheimer outlined a platform calling for new emphasis on safety in traffic and protection of citizens and property against crime.

"Our new program of safety patrol work in school districts has resulted in reducing the fatalities among school children in the county to zero this year," he said.

Asks Voters' Support

"Also the special first-aid training we provided for deputies is saving countless lives among accident victims by proper treatment at the scene of accidents." Mr. Magenheimer asked voters to support his office at the polls Nov. 2 "in order that we may continue this vital program of saving lives."

The sheriff's office demands the services of trained personnel," he said. "My 20 years on the police department here has qualified me for the job. I ask you to compare my law enforcement experience with that of my opponent (James F. Cunningham, Democratic candidate for sheriff.)

Fifty-five local savings and loan officers and employees are enrolled this year in classes of the American Savings and Loan Institute chapter here. Rudolph T. Grundner, president of the chapter, reported today.

Two new courses have been added for the local chapter. Classes begin Monday nights in the lobby of the Railroadmen's Federal Savings and Loan Association.

Faculty members this year are Dale F. Griffin, vice principal of Arsenal Technical High School, and Lisle W. Tinsman, assistant auditor of the Railroadmen's Federal Savings and Loan Association.

The educational committee is made up of Harold R. Taylor, secretary of Union Federal Savings and Loan; John A. Eagleston, of Railroadmen's, and Harriett R. Hunter of Arsenal Building and Loan Association.
