

Israeli Say Attacks Cut Egyptian Lines In South Palestine

Marshall Looks Over War in Greece; Clay Insists He Won't Try to Retire

The Army of Israel, ignoring a United Nations cease-fire order, hurled tanks and planes against key Egyptian bases in Egypt and southern Palestine today.

An Israeli spokesman said the combination of air and ground attacks had disrupted the lines of communication linking Egypt's forward bases in southern Palestine with home territory. He said Egyptian casualties had been heavy.

Cairo reports said Egyptian anti-tank guns had set fire to "all enemy tanks" which attacked Egyptian positions. More than 500 Jews were killed, the Cairo reports said.

At the same time fighting broke out in Jerusalem. Disputes from the Holy City said Arab machine gunners on the old city wall fired on a white car bearing United Nations markings, in which acting United States Consul General John J. MacDonal and senior truce observer Col. George Millet were riding. Three bullets penetrated but the men were not hit.

The United Nations order to both sides to cease fire was rejected by Israel. No reply has yet been received from Egypt.

In Cairo, well-informed sources believed the Israeli attack marked the final end of the three-month Palestine truce. Pablo Azcarate, chief UN official in Cairo, said Egyptian officials had warned him that the Israeli attack meant Egypt would have to begin full-scale operations.

(Meanwhile at Paris the United Nations Security Council prepared today to take emergency action if Arab and Jewish armies in southern Palestine continue to defy UN cease-fire orders.)

Greece

SECRETARY of State George C. Marshall arrived by air today to see for himself why, even with the help of American millions, the Greek government has failed to wipe out its guerrilla enemies. Only a few hours before his arrival, United States Ambassador Henry Grady conceded in a written interview that the situation is "not completely satisfactory."

Grady replied, "No comment," when asked if the Greek government might be holding back in the hope of getting even more American money.

Mr. Marshall will fly back to Paris tomorrow, to participate when the United Nations General Assembly takes up the Greek question.

Germany

GEN. Lucius D. Clay, American commander in Germany, said today he will not ask to retire "as long as Berlin is under blockade."

"I'd be a damn poor soldier if I requested to leave," he said.

Yesterday's visit here by John Foster Dulles, Republican Party foreign policy adviser, stimulated reports that Gen. Clay may re-submit his retirement application. Mr. Dulles, who may be the next secretary of state, is known to oppose some of Gen. Clay's policies. It has been predicted publicly that Mr. Dulles might want to replace the general.

Meanwhile, a German newspaper reported that Gen. Walter Von Seydlitz, founder of the Soviet-sponsored Free Germany Committee, arrived in Berlin last night to reorganize German police in the Soviet zone.

The Free Germany movement was founded in Russia in July, 1943, by captured high-ranking German officers, anti-Nazis and Communists who fled Germany.

France

THE long-rumored "semi-devaluation" of the French franc, reducing its foreign-trade value by 20 percent, was announced today by the French government.

The change was described by the government as "monetary reform" rather than "devaluation."

The reform, which becomes effective Monday, pegs the export value of the franc at 264 to the dollar—an approximate average between the former export exchange rate of 214 to the dollar and the free rate, which fluctuates around 310.

Meanwhile, the Communist-led coal miners' union announced that it would meet government negotiators to discuss the strike which has kept 350,000 miners idle for 13 days.

Seek Death in Divorcee's Trial

Broglin Murder Case Opens Tomorrow

The state will attempt to send a well-to-do East Side divorcee to the electric chair when her trial for first degree murder in the slaying of her second husband opens tomorrow in Criminal Court 1.

Thrice-married Jeanette Oder is charged with fatally shooting Harvey Samuel Broglin, the ex-husband, as he came up the snow covered steps to her porch on the night of Feb. 30.

While the 46-year-old brunet quietly waits in her Marion County jail cell, attorneys will be busy in the high-ceilinged, 75-year-old courtroom selecting a jury from a list of 300 veniremen.

Each will be asked the same question by deputy prosecutors Harry E. Riddell and Robert E. Coates: Do you believe in the death penalty for murder?

Of Prominent Family

Mrs. Oder's full name is Jeanette Weaver Joyce Broglin Oder. She lived at 2538 Brookside Pkwy. She is a member of a prominent Indianapolis family and was a swimming star in her youth.

Mrs. Oder, who had been divorced from Broglin two years, told detectives after the shooting: "When he called and told me he would be over, I got out my revolver. It was jammed. I oiled it and went to the back door where I fired it to be sure it was in working condition."

"It was either him or me. I divorced him for it—cruelty. I guess you call it. He annoyed me constantly and I was afraid of him."

Broglin, 35, was a bartender.

Trucker Hits Tree, Dies

Jefferson H. Peach, 22, Route 1, Owensville, was killed early yesterday, when the truck he was driving crashed into a tree on the county road, three miles north of Johnson, in Gibson County, state police reported.
