State C. of C. Directors Tackle Taxation Problems

FRENCH LICK, Nov. 5—The board of directors of the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce plunged into state tax problems here today on the heels of an election expected to bring about a sharp shift toward heavier government spending.

At a panel discussion this afternoon under the chairmanship of S. M. Jenks, C. of C. vice president, and general manager of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., at Gary, the board dug into the financial picture of the state government and what may happen to it under a shift to a Democratic administration.

The board put the $140 million veterans bonus under the business microscope to determine how it could be administered economically. No resolution was passed today.

The reassessment of real estate was brought up to date and a renewed effort was proposed for the elimination of the state property tax.

William Book, executive vice president of the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, led a discussion on city financing at which it was pointed out that a "top layer" for municipal use could be placed on the present gross income tax, thus saving collection costs.

At today's luncheon, Dr. Frank Sparks, president of Wabash College, spoke on his recent trip to Europe and stressed the need for the rehabilitation of organized education along democratic lines.

In the free countries of the continent. Tonight Dr. Arthur M. Weimer, dean of the School of Business, Indiana University, will address the dinner meeting.

Tomorrow's agenda includes panel discussions of welfare costs, unemployment compensation administration and a transportation panel with C. Harvey Bradley, second vice president of the C of C, presiding.

The afternoon panel will enter the fields of women's working hours in industry, the public utility arbitration law, check-off union dues, equal pay for equal work for women, and legislation to legalize collective bargaining for public employees and state Fair Employment Practices and other legislation.
