MP's Cornered by Enlisted Men In Fight Over Which Is 'Tougher'

TOKYO, Jan. 25 (UP)—Four American soldiers were shot and one was stabbed in a riot at Camp Crawford on Hokkaido Island Sunday night, Allied Headquarters announced today.

The shootings took place at an enlisted men's club when military police, who came to put down the trouble, were cornered and had to shoot their way out.

It was believed the riot broke out when members of the 11th Airborne and the 7th Division argued over which outfit was the "tougher."

The Seventh Division was transferred recently from Korea to Japan to replace the 11th Airborne Division, which is going to the United States.

Three "seriously" wounded. Another received a cut on the right forearm when he dived out of a window after the shooting started. Another was stabbed shortly afterwards in front of a nearby barracks.

Names of the victims were withheld until their relatives were informed of their condition.

"The fracas that preceded the shooting started about 8 p. m. Sunday night when several soldiers started throwing empty cans and bottles and chairs in the club," the spokesman said.

"The manager ordered the club closed and requested assistance from military police.

Struck by Bottle
"When military police attempted to move the men out, some of them refused and crowded the military police to a small stage.

"After the crowd had refused to obey repeated orders to leave and one M. P. had been struck with a flying bottle, the police fired several shots."

The military police involved were identified as Pvt. John Juliano of Buffalo, N. Y., and Pvt. Edward R. Eggleston of Minneapolis, Minn.

A board of officers was named to investigate the riot.

Alonso Wollery, 39, of 933 S. Illinois, was charged with keeping a gaming house and disorderly conduct.

Nine others arrested there were charged with visiting a gaming house and disorderly conduct. Various paraphernalia including an adding machine and an envelope full of "slip" were confiscated.

23 Plead Guilty In Gaming Case

Times Staff Service
BEDFORD, Jan. 25—Twenty-nine gaming cases were disposed of in wholesale fashion in Lawrence Circuit court yesterday when Attorney R. L. Allen, defense counsel, appeared before Judge Chester A. Davis and entered pleas of guilty for 23 defendants.

Fines and costs totaled $1806.95, largest amount paid by gaming defendants in one day since the raids on alleged gaming establishments were made by city and state police in 1947 and 1948.

Two defendants, David Torphy and Thomas Gresham, each arrested for operating a gaming house, were fined $75 and costs and given three month suspended penal farm sentences. The other defendants, six charged with two counts, were fined $50 and costs on visiting charges.

The 23 defendants were arrested in connection with raids on the rear room of Torphy's tavern. The first raid was staged Aug. 5, 1947, and the second occurred Feb. 28, 1948. In May, 1948, officers again visited the rear room and confiscated gaming equipment and made more arrests.

Prosecutor Thomas Shroult said that several gaming cases were still pending in circuit court as result of the raids here. He said the charges were filed against alleged operators and others for keeping a room for gaming purposes.

Police Seize Baby In Domestic Tiff

Police charged a man and his wife with disorderly conduct and sent their 14-month-old son to the Guardians Home following a domestic argument which resulted in two police calls last night to 1255 Madison Ave.

Mrs. Agnes Ferguson, 28, who lives at that address, told them the first time that her husband, Lewis, 35, grabbed the baby from her and took him away.

Police said the Fergusons were arguing on the sidewalk when they made their second call and that Mr. Ferguson told them he had taken the baby to a good home. Police found the child at 223 Orange St. in surroundings unfit to be a home, they said, and turned the baby over to juvenile authorities pending outcome of the domestic tiff.

Federal Education Subsidy Is 1st C. of C. Forum Topic

Teacher Says Help Would Improve Literacy; Opponent Urges State and Local Financing

By CARL HENN
The use of government funds to subsidize the school systems was alternately approved and opposed last night in a forum on federal aid to education, held in Caleb Mills hall, Shortridge High School.

Miss Mary Titus, a former classroom teacher from Huntington, W. Va., opened the debate by declaring government help the only quick road to bringing a minimum program of education to American youth.

She was opposed by Paul H. Good, director of the education department of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Good advocated retention of present state and local methods of financing schools.

"Government money to support our schools must come first from us," Mr. Good said. "Why should we send in our money to get it back—minus the brokerage fee?"

Miss Titus cited the more than eight million functional illiterates and two million persons without even a fourth grade education in the United States to illustrate the immediate need for comprehensive, general aid to our schools.

"While we voice that noble ideal, equality of opportunity, we fail to provide it at one important point—in equality of education," she said.

During the debate and a question-and-answer period which followed, Miss Titus and Mr. Good at times used the same set of statistics to illustrate opposite viewpoints.

Miss Titus declared, for instance, that there were four million children between the ages of 5 and 17 not now enrolled in any school.

Examining this figure, Mr. Good broke down the total to two million children between 5 and 6 years old and one and one-half million between 16 and 17 years old. All but one-half million lived in states not requiring schooling at the border ages, he said.

Mr. Good suggested that Federal funds may lead to eventual Federal control of teachers and what they teach. This possibility was rejected by his opponent, a member of the Legislative department of the National Education Association.

While admitting there were restrictions on the money offered to states under a bill now before Congress, Miss Titus said the measure safeguards our schools against any form of regimentation, now or in the future.

Sponsored by the American Opportunity Committee of the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, the forum was the first of a series. Others include debates on public housing and medicine.

Harry T. Ice, chairman of the C. of C. Education Committee, was moderator for the discussion. He was introduced by Howard J. Lacy, chairman of the American Opportunity Committee.

Jenner Urged to Oppose Everything Truman Does

Senator Indicates That's What He'll Do; Hailed for Voting Against Acheson

By DAN KIDNEY, Times Staff Writer
WASHINGTON, Jan. 25—Sen. William E. Jenner (R. Ind.) is receiving congratulatory letters, telegrams and penny postcards from Indiana and other states because he voted against confirmation of the appointment of Dean Acheson as Secretary of State.

There were only six votes against Mr. Acheson's confirmation cast in the Senate and two were by the Hoosier Senators, for Sen. Homer E. Capehart joined Sen. Jenner in opposition.

The other four were Sens. Styles Bridges (N. H.), William F. Knowland (Cal.), William Langer (N. D.) and Kenneth S. Wherry (Neb.), all Republicans.

Sen. Jenner's office so far has received written approval from 43 persons, 22 of whom wrote from Indiana.

Several went on to urge Sen. Jenner to oppose everything and everyone President Truman espoused. He has indicated that this is what he intends to do.

Duplicating the outstanding "isolationist" speech made by him in the 80th Congress, Sen. Jenner told the Senate that the only "sorry" vote he cast was against the Acheson appointment.

Home Folks' OK
Greek-Turkish aid is the only part of the program of international co-operation which either Indiana Senator supported.

"That this meets with approval by some of the home folks was indicated in the following from a woman in Clinton:

"Permit me to express approval of yours and Sen. Capehart's vote against confirmation of Dean Acheson. I hope in time the country will come to have more patriots of your type."

From a man at Winona Lake came this praise:

"I note that both Indiana Senators had the guts to vote against the Acheson appointment. This makes me mighty proud of you two men as it indicates clearly you intend to do your American patriotic duty regardless of the odds against you."

"God help this nation if the members of Congress do not put love of country above politics."

Piece of Gas Pipe Scares Off Holdup

The cards were stacked, so to speak, when a man attempting a holdup leaped on the side of the truck of James Stack, 38, of 614 S. Manhattan St., who was driving a woman acquaintance home.

Mr. Stack was driving north on Delaware St. near St. Joseph St. when it happened. He looked at the man, saw no gun, reached into the glove compartment of his truck cab and pulled out a long piece of gas pipe.

The would-be holdup man disembarked and Mr. Stack took his friend home in a taxi, then reported the incident to police.
