Joan Stays on Cold Standard

Comedienne Davis Saves Precious California Snow

By Earl Wilson

NEW YORK, Feb. 2—Miss Joan Davis, the comedienne, claims to be the only Californian still saving some of the snow that recently fell in Hollywood.

"I put some of that snow in my deep freeze to show to anybody who doesn't believe it," Miss Davis, a tall, rangy blonde party, said the other day.

"Why," she assured me, excitedly, "that snow'll be there a fortune some day!"

This may indicate the workings of a comedienne's mind. I don't know. It may indicate the non-working of a comedienne's mind.

ANYWAY, Miss Davis, who comes from St. Paul, is one of a half dozen funny women in America. Bea Little, Fanny Brice, Martha Raye, Judy Canova, and Nancy Walker are the others. But Miss Davis is distinctive. I'll bet you not another one of those comedienne have any California snow in their deep freezes.

At first when she told me this, I thought the girl might be suffering from Inaugural-Shock.

Several people have it. You see high silk hats in front of your eyes and imagine that a cop is pushing you back, back, back... Miss Davis' career was given quite a boost by appearing before President Truman at the Inaugural Gala.

People were not talking about her in large numbers before that, but now people are and just her people, either.

Heart of Taxes

I SAW her at the Gala, and would like to say she was hilarious—so I will. She suggested, for instance, that income tax be changed from Mar. 15.

Two days after that you are supposed to wear the green," she said. "How can you wear the green when they've just taken all your green from you?"

Then she said, "I have a request—but I'm going to sing anyway."

Next she ad libbed a line. Her dress seemed to be falling off her shoulders and she growled, "I can't keep these things up. Has anybody got any old Dewey buttons?"

SOME TIME after this, she told her she enjoyed her performance—and she'll always wonder whether it was because of the "old Dewey buttons" gag.

"Then," she said, "the night of the Inaugural Ball, I went up to
