Russia Backs Yugoslav Claim To Austria Soil

East-West Split Menaces 4-Power Talks in London on Peace Treaty

Russia championed the right of Yugoslavia to press claims to Austrian territory when the Big Four met today in London.

The whole foundation for the resumption of four-power talks on an Austrian treaty was threatened by the immediate appearance of a gap between the East and the West over Yugoslav reparations and territorial claims against Austria.

The meeting was arranged in hope that Marshal Tito's dispute with Russia and other communist countries would have changed the Soviet position with regard to the Yugoslav aspect of the Austrian treaty.

The perennial friction between the East and the West flared up as soon as the deputies of the Council of Foreign Ministers resumed their talks after a recess of nine months.

Back to Last May Russia demanded that the Big Four group invite Yugoslavia to press the reparations and territorial claims.

Within an hour the conference apparently was back where it was when it broke up last May 6. The meeting was recessed without a settlement of even the first procedural problem.

The United States, Great Britain and France all objected to the hearing of Yugoslav claims particularly to the Austrian province of Carinthia which lies along the Yugoslav border.

The Soviets also opposed writing into the Austrian settlement a Big Four guarantee of the country's frontiers.
