'Honey' of a Tip Has Title Role

GREENWICH, Conn., Feb. 14 (UP)—After lecturing more than 50,000 couples on guarantees for a happy honeymoon, Betty White chose this Valentine's Day to begin taking her own advice.

Miss White, who heads a "honeymoon center" in New York City, was married today to advertising executive Harry Schacter.

Press Agents Go Back to Barnum

California Turns on Ballyhoo As Customers Tighten Purses

By Erskine Johnson

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 14—The scenery just isn't enough any more.

Like movie theater owners and radio show sponsors, the coast's famous winter resorts have discovered that even movie stars and eastern millionaires (not to mention ordinary tourists) want premiums these days.

The post-war tightening of purse strings started it and last month's snow on the palm trees finished it.

Today there's a press agent behind every palm tree (or snow bank), bouncers disguised as cowboys throwing people into the resorts and Barnum-like ballyhoo including such things as orchid sandwiches and perfumed swimming pools.

I became aware of this new trend in keeping the public happy when George Raft and Billy Mann bought the swank Desert Retreat at Palm Springs.

THERE WAS an immediate announcement that the Retreat would feature the only perfumed swimming pool in the world. But even this was done with a gimmick.

It seems that a mystery scent would be inserted into the pool at weekly intervals and anyone guessing the name of the scent would receive extra accommodations gratis.

I don't know whether this offer still is in force but I did hear of a Hollywood producer who won the club's undying enmity. They asked this fellow to guess the scent and without the slightest hesitation he said:

"It smells just like my last picture."

NEXT I HAD an announcement from the elite Bel Air Hotel that its chef was whipping up orchid sandwiches—using orchid leaves instead of lettuce. Inasmuch as they did not send along one of their orchid sandwiches, I can't vouch for the taste but I'm told that orchids have it all over lettuce in the preparation of tasty tidbits.

Then I heard about the sunken, Roman-type baths in nearly every room of the swank new Palm Springs Biltmore. Each tube is five feet square and holds more than a hundred gallons of water.

Eva Arden took her two children there recently and later told a friend: "We spent a wonderful week end in a bathtub at Palm Springs."

When Red Skelton was a guest, he telephoned room service and said: "I'm going to take a bath now. Would you please send up a pair of water wings and about 25 feet of rope."
