

Fluffy Yellow Ducks, Rainbow Chicks Find Friend As Judge Raps Easter Gift Fad

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Mar. 3 (UP)—Those fluffy yellow ducklings of baby chickens and ducks are sacrificed.

Judge Bacon said that the humane society plans to appeal to prospective buyers—not dealers—to eliminate the fad. He got a quick reply from pet dealer Coyle Shea who said that he stopped handling colored baby chicks a year ago.

He thought that pet dealers would "welcome this campaign and try to co-operate."

Judge Bacon said that most of the chicks for the mid-South market are shipped by big hatcheries in Ohio and Indiana.

"They are discards or off-breeds, the cheapest type chicken," he explained. "Handling them has not been too popular with dealers—they sold them to accommodate customers who asked for them."

Mr. Shea agreed that Easter chicks meet untimely deaths because of mishandling by boys and girls.

"Ducks, however, are 20 times as hardy as a baby chick," he said. "A baby duck not only survives—it grows fast and with such rapidity that it looks like it has been blown up with a bicycle pump."

"As for pets, ducks soon follow children about the house and yard like shadows. But they are dirty, and their odor is not the sweetest thing in the world."

Judge Bacon said that the practice means food waste from the standpoint of eggs, fryers and laying hens.

Dogs Harder to Catch?

CHARLEMONT, Mass. (UP)—This tiny town's police chief gets $10 a year, which is $5 less than the official dog catcher.
