Daughter for Shively's
1st. Lt. George Knox Shively and his wife, the former Miss Mary Jane Newhouse of Indianapolis, today announced the birth of their daughter, Vicki Sue, in Ft. McPherson hospital, Atlanta.

Mr. and Mrs. Kling counsel their newspaper readers only through The Times. If you have a question, address it to Samuel G. and Esther B. Kling, in care of The Indianapolis Times.

After they became engaged, however, he insisted that she agree to live at home with his parents, despite the fact that he earned a substantial income, and his parents enjoyed good health.

This Miss Y. refused to do that.
That was how matters stood when she consented to marry him.

When we saw Mr. B. he readily admitted his great attachment to his mother. Close questioning revealed that he had attended three different colleges and had left each one because he had been homesick.

Mr. B. flatly refused to accept the idea of living anywhere but in his parents' home. Indeed, he was outraged that his fiancee should resent having to do so. No amount of reasoning could change his mind.

In our next interview with Miss Y., we told her it would be most unwise for her to go through with the marriage, unless she could accept the fact that he was a mother's boy and put up with it.

We pointed out that while it was natural for a son to be fond of his parents, Mr. B. gave evidence of emotional immaturity.

He had a strong parent fixation.
