

Congress Taft to Lead Fight on Labor Bill Revamping

Senate Committee Beats Down GOP Protests to OK Measure

WASHINGTON, Mar. 5 (UP)—Sen. Robert A. Taft (R., O.) promised today to lead a GOP battle on the Senate floor to rewrite the administration's new labor bill.

The Democratic majority on the Senate Labor Committee drowned out Republican protests yesterday and approved the measure just as President Truman asked. The vote was split along party lines, 8 to 5.

Sen. Taft, Republican Party spokesman on domestic issues, told newsmen he believed a Senate majority could be mustered to send the bill back to the committee.

What's the Use?

"But what's the use of sending a bill back to that committee?" he asked.

He referred to the fact that the group is controlled by administration supporters. He expects a different outcome on the Senate floor where a good many southern Democrats may support moves to retain features of the Taft-Hartley act.

The administration measure would repeal the Taft-Hartley law and replace it with an "improved" version of the old Wagner labor relations act.

GOP members of the Senate Labor Committee are trying to reach agreement on a series of amendments to be proposed to the administration measure. However, Sen. Taft doubted that they could agree on everything.

To other congressional developments:

Filibuster

Administration Senators were summoned to a conference today to see whether the anti-filibuster drive can be salvaged. But with southern Democrats and Republicans teaming up against any attempt to choke off the week-old debate, some administration sources had just about given up on an anti-filibuster curb this session.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas of Illinois, however, scheduled an unusual Saturday Senate session in an effort to reach a showdown in his determined fight with southerners over the issue.

Foreign Aid

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee stopped work on extension of the Marshall Plan until Recovery Chief Paul G. Hoffman explains exactly how he plans to spend foreign aid funds in the 1950 fiscal year.

The administration has requested $5,580,000,000 to continue the Economic Co-operation Administration for 15 months.

Oleo

Two housekeepers couldn't decide whether or not they should be able to buy tax-free yellow oleomargarine at the corner grocery. Miss Anna Lord Straus, president of the League of Women Voters, said they should. But Mrs. Ethel M. Clark, wife of a Leroy N. Y. dairy farmer, disagreed. The pair presented their views to the House Agriculture Committee which is considering a batch of bills to repeal the federal oleo tax. Some of the measures would ban sale of yellow oleo.

Rents

House Democrats predicted a formula to guarantee landlords a "fair return" will be included in the rent bill. The formula was voted down in the House Banking Committee, but Rep. Albert Rains (D., Ala.), a high-ranking member of the group, said he thought the formula would win when the bill comes up for debate on the House floor.

The House committee has approved a 15-month rent control extension bill, but the Senate banking group is still holding hearings on the rent measure.

Switch in Soviet Policy Foreseen

Vishinsky Known As Hater of West

By WILLIAM PHILIP SIMMS
St. Petersburg, U.S.S.R.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 5.—The shake-up in Moscow, according to Allied intelligence sources here, portends a shift in Russian foreign policy—perhaps the biggest since 1939.

In that year, Maxim Litvinov, who favored an understanding with the West, was suddenly replaced by Vyacheslav Molotov, who wholeheartedly hated the West. And within a matter of months Moscow and Berlin had struck their bargain and set the green light for World War II.

Now Foreign Minister Molotov has been supplanted by Andrei Vishinsky. If Mr. Litvinov was named Mr. Molotov's successor, the West might have felt the Kremlin was about to suggest a real peace move. But Mr. Vishinsky, if anything, hates the West even more venomously than does Mr. Molotov, so his advent may mean a policy even more drastic.

Struggle Behind Scenes

That something is going on behind the Iron Curtain has been known here for some time. It could have something to do with the struggle within the Kremlin for the mantle of Stalin.

Or it could be over the question of peace or war with the West.

Ever since the sudden death of Col. Gen. Zhdanov last fall, the Politburo has been in turmoil. Gen. Zhdanov is known to have favored immediate war with the West—for overrunning the rest of Europe and perhaps the Middle East—before the United States and Britain could rearm. And before anything like the Western Union and the Atlantic pact could be formed.

Cites Impending Economic Crisis in Blow at Capitalism

The Soviet army organ Red Star today hailed as developments in a growing peace movement the statements by Communist leaders in several countries that they would support Russia in case of war.

A Red Star commentator bracketed with the "inviolability" of the growing forces for peace what he called "unmistakable signs of an impending economic crisis which compels the capitalist world to seek to increase aggressive powers."

The commentator referred to peace meetings and demonstrations in all parts of the world and continued:

"How the ranks of the friends of peace have grown in opposition to international reaction is evidenced by recent statement of Communist leaders in France, Italy, England, Germany, Norway and Mexico.

"Through those voices the Communist parties, leading the struggle of their peoples for peace and democracy, have declared that the workers of those countries oppose actively any attempts by international reaction to organize an assault against the Soviet Union."
