Ask Mrs. Manners—Wonders Why Teeners Have to Be So Noisy

DEAR MRS. MANNERS:

DON'T you think teen-agers could calm down enough to have a house party without having to slobber all over the place? Couldn't they settle down one evening for games and a good time, without dancing?

I'm afraid you got the wrong impression from the letter my teen-age daughter wrote you. I dance myself and approve of it in its place. I'm just in my middle 30's, so I'm not an old fogey. My daughter is allowed to go dancing and skating, but must be escorted or go with girls her age I approve of. She must be in by 11:30 p. m. unless it's something special, and, of course, she has to stay home school nights.

Now is that too much to ask of a teen-ager? I never object to her going any place which is properly chaperoned, but you'd be surprised how many teen-agers have parties without chaperones. Do you think it would be fair to the "double" where we live to hold a jam session? I doubt if they'd object, but they're our landladies. I'm afraid my daughter has her way too much.

MRS. J. CITY.

You're right about encouraging teen-agers to be versatile in their interests, for the adaptable people are the most popular and the happiest. For instance, a girl could impress her boyfriend's mother by playing a good game of bridge, and impress the boy whose allowance might be low.

Those teen-agers should be considerate, as you say. The

Your Marriage: By Samuel and Esther Kling—Persons Seldom Change Just Because They Marry

Q—Does fickleness before marriage usually continue afterward? A—Yes. Take the case of Mr. and Mrs. A., for example. This young couple had been married for only a few months and already Mrs. A. was obviously unhappy.

The trouble was that her husband was always making passes at other women. Whenever they went to a party, Mrs. A. complained, her husband would carry on an active flirtation with as attractive a woman as he could find. And it didn't end with words or glances.

To top it all off, Mrs. A. discovered that her husband had been seen out with several of these women. She was furious. What could she do?

When we asked this young wife whether her husband had shown any great interest in other women during their engagement, we learned that even during this period he had dated other girls, and had flirted outrageously in the presence of his fiancée.

We told Mrs. A. that the man who is fickle after he is engaged will probably remain so after he is married. To wed such an emotionally immature person is always risky.

But now that she was already married, we suggested, she try to make the best of the situation, especially since she still loved her husband. We suggested, also, that if he persisted in his behavior and she continued to find the situation intolerable, a trial separation might frighten him into fidelity.

Q—Can faithfulness in a mate be predicted?

Canada C. Glidewell, life-long farm resident near Traders Point, was to be buried today in Pleasant Hill after services at 2:30 p. m. in Traders Point Church of Christ, of which he was a member.

Born in Marion County, Mr. Glidewell, who was 90, had been retired several years. He and his wife, Mame, who survives him, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary several years ago.

Also surviving is a brother, Mancher F. Glidewell, Zionville.

Sen. Broughton's Rites Tomorrow

RALEIGH, N. C., Mar. 7 (UP)—Sen. J. Melville Broughton (D., N. C.) was to arrive here today for burial. He died yesterday in Washington of a heart attack. He was 60.

Funeral services will be tomorrow at the Tabernacle Baptist Church, where he taught Sunday school before going to Washington. Burial will be in Monticello Memorial Park.

The robust North Carolinian began a full Senate term Jan. 3, after winning a hard-fought race with Sen. William B. Umstead for the post. His election to a short term covering the last months of 1948 gave him seniority over most of the other 1949 freshmen Senators.

KILL 6 SPANISH BANDITS

CORUNA, Spain, Mar. 7 (UP)—Reports from Pueblo Zas said today that six bandits were killed and one civil guard wounded when a guards detachment engaged a group of bandits. The reports said that several armed women belonging to the group were arrested.
