Wonders if Boy Friend Loves Her or Her Car

DEAR MRS. MANNERS: I wonder if my boy friend loves me or my automobile. I can't drive, but bought a new car to take my mind off him when he quit coming around.

I didn't have the car long before he asked me for dates again once a week. He drives his old car to my house and we go out in mine. On Saturdays, he takes me riding in my car and takes me to work. I let him use my car and he picks me up at 2 a.m. after work. I've heard he takes other girls out in my car while I work. Through the week he never takes me home, and he never gave me a Christmas present.

I could hardly stand to go out with him at first, but I was lonely. I stayed home all the time after he quit. I'm 25 and he is 30. —WORRIED.

"Bribes?" like new cars won't substitute for personality and attractiveness. Spend those lonesome hours on improving yourself. You won't be lonely, and you won't miss the man you're concentrating on as a last straw. He'd be around taking you places in his old car, if he were interested.

Employment Data

CAN YOU help me learn about finding employment in foreign countries? —S. M. G.

Write the Secretary of War offices, 1429 Adams-Franklin Bldg., 222 W. Adams St., Chicago, and the 11th U. S. Civil Service office, Post Office Building, Seattle, Wash. (for material on Alaska). Inquire of Indianapolis oil, fruit and rubber companies.

Understand Trouble

I BELIEVE you understand Northern Indiana Reader's trouble—resentment of his family. He may be harboring hate for voids in his cultural background, or dislike of inherited physical characteristics. He needs to face it since you continue to fuss. He might come back if you learned control, but be sure he's through with gambling or you'll lose control. You can't remarry and be happy unless both of you get rid of your major faults that caused divorce. Work out a life for yourself—on a job and in recreation. You won't have time to mope, mourn and blow up if you're busy.

BLOOMINGTON READER.

You—she DOES a psychiatrist.

Worth Fooling With

WHAT would you do about a man who has a wife in a tuberculosis sanatorium and neglects her, running around looking for other women to take her place? She needs things he could get. Is he worth fooling with?

A CITY READER.

He's worth "fooling with," for his own sake and because his wife needs him and probably loves him. Ask a minister or some person the husband respects to intercede.

Wants Him Back

I WAS married 11 years to a good worker who gambled. We both worked and had a place of business, but I blew up and now he is gone. We're divorced. I've begged him to come home, but he said I asked for it and should be satisfied. I'm nearly crazy for love him so much.

We always get into it when we talk. What could I do to get him back? I have children, nearly grown, by a previous marriage but he seemed to like them. —KRINTA.

Your temper probably lost him, and he's sure you've kept

He'll talk as long as you argue, and he'll pick on someone else when you stop.

About Corsages

ON WHICH shoulder is it proper to wear a corsage at a dance? Is it proper to wear it on an evening wrap before the dance?

Wear it any place it looks well—on either shoulder, close to the neckline, at the waist, in your hair, or your evening bag or atop your bustle.
