Hoosier Profile

"INTERDENOMINATIONAL co-operation" sounds stilted to the average person, more like a topic for panel discussion than for every-day living.

If someone had mentioned the subject to Mrs. Marjorie Waggoner three years ago, the day she went looking for an old organ for her antique collection, and told her she was embarking as a leader in inter-faith work, the wisecracking Mrs. W. would probably have glanced over both shoulders, looked under the desk and quipped: "Who—me?"

For Mrs. Waggoner is a self-described "sometimes" church-goer, a businesswoman who works every day with no time or inclination to be a clubwoman.

Yet it was Mrs. Waggoner, a Protestant, who founded and became first president of the Guild of Marydale School, the home for girls operated by the Catholic Sisters of the Good Shepherd. A baptized Methodist, she's a leading worker in the Displaced Persons program of the Catholic churches here.

It isn't that she consciously thinks in terms of being "interdenominational," Mrs. Waggoner says. "It's just that I can't look at a person and stop to wonder if he's Methodist, Baptist, Catholic, Jewish or Mohammedan before I decide to like or help him. If someone's a good person or a person in need, what does it matter where he spends his Sundays?"

Mrs. Marjorie Waggoner . . . "What does it matter where people spend Sunday?"

Guild Has Grown to 400 Members

WITH this practical approach, Mrs. Waggoner succeeded in founding a group of 400 Guild members of all faiths and races to help the unfortunate and neglected girls in the Sisters of the Good Shepherd shelter. It is fitting that the Guild should be inter-faith, since many times there are more Protestant than Catholic girls in Marydale.

It all started when Mrs. Waggoner, an avid antique collector, wondered where she could find an organ for her home at 7000 W. 10th St. One of the employees of Indiana Film Transit Co., which Mrs. Waggoner manages, suggested she call the Sisters of the Good Shepherd convent.

"I told her I wouldn't know what to say to them but she got me the number and I called," Mrs. Waggoner recalls. "I asked a Sister and she told me they had three organs in the attic and I was welcome to any of them."

Since the Sisters declined any payment, Mrs. Waggoner asked to be allowed to do something to return the favor. It was then she learned about Marydale, where the Sisters try to house and rehabilitate wayward and neglected girls.

"My heart went out when I saw those little girls just sitting between classes — no shows, nothing to play with," she says. "I got all heated up."

'Film Row' Opens Its Heart

IT WAS then the protestant woman embarked to help the Catholic home. The first place she went was to a group she knew through her firm and whom she knew to be open-handed in charity, "Film Row." That the men she contacted were predominantly Jewish never occurred to her to be strange, nor did it to them. They immediately provided movies for the girls and got together money to buy them roller skates and recreation equipment.

Another time, planning a party, she needed both money for refreshment and volunteer workers. Her husband is Rex Waggoner of the police force and she went to one of their friends, a high-ranking police officer. When she was through with the story of Marydale, the officer who is also a 32d Degree Mason, bought food for the party and showed up there to fry the hamburger himself.

Since the Guild has grown to a group of 400, members have taken part in other activities. Recently they were asked to help take care of DP's during Indianapolis stopovers. Mrs. Waggoner volunteered.

Since Feb. 2 she's answered rush calls to Union Station almost every other day. She hurries down, greets the bewildered, travel-weary foreigners, gets warm food into them and many times takes them to her home. In addition she puts in full days at the film company where she's worked for 19 years.

So far she's had 15 persons in her home, sometimes for several days until they resume journeys. And to her every DP is remembered not by nationality or faith but as an individual. She knows each one's story, keeps track of them and frequently drops in on the ones who have settled close. Her greatest thrill, she says, is watching their fear fade; to be replaced by a glowing gratefulness and love of America.

It shows, she feels, not in speeches but in little things. Like the four-year-old Polish boy she kept a month ago, a timid boy, too shy even to try to speak English.

She saw the little boy a week ago and could almost see a red, white and blue banner back of the stars in his eys as he rushed up, grabbed her and said: "Hi kiddo." (By Donna Mikels)
