

17 in Senate Brace to Fight Colored Oleo

Dairy Bloc Plans Substitute Bill To Lift Tax Only

WASHINGTON, Apr. 2 (UPI)—Dairy state Senators began organizing today for their fight against the House-approved bill to repeal federal taxes on oleomargarine.

And one of them, Sen. Edward J. Thye, (R. Minn.), warned that the measure might bring "days and days" of debate which could upset the administration's legislative program.

Nevertheless, Senate Democratic leader Scott W. Lucas, of Illinois said he was confident the repeal bill would be brought to a vote this year.

And Chairman Walter F. George, (D. Ga.) of the Senate Finance Committee, which will handle the measure, said there was a good chance it will be enacted.

Time to Meet Threat
To meet that threat, it was announced that a bipartisan bloc of 17 dairy state senators would introduce a substitute bill Monday to repeal the oleo taxes but to forbid sale of colored oleo in interstate commerce.

A similar measure was rejected by the House yesterday before it voted, 287 to 89, to repeal existing taxes and to allow untaxed yellow oleo to be sold in interstate commerce.

The House passed a repeal bill last year and the Senate finance committee approved it. But the threat of prolonged debate was enough to keep the measure from the floor in the waning days of the session. That same threat this year in the dairy bloc's chief weapon. Meanwhile House Republicans and Southern Democrats publicly claimed victory today in their battle to block the administration's drive for Taft-Hartley Act repeal.

Coalition Revived
The revived coalition, considered dead earlier, insisted it has enough votes to write its own labor bill. The legislation will not take the Taft-Hartley Act off the statute books, its leaders said.

The administration's bill, which would re-enact an "improved" Wagner Act, is now pending before the House Rules Committee. There were strong indications that it will not be sent to the floor for debate before May.

The strategy of the Taft-Hartley supporters is to permit the administration's bill to come to the House floor. But as soon as debate opens, another bill will be offered as a substitute.

Should the House accept the substitute, parliamentary rules would forbid the offering of further amendments. The administration would be blocked completely from efforts to make the measure conform to some of the demands of organized labor.

Attorney General Says U. S. Reds 'Are Scampering'

WASHINGTON, Apr. 2 (UPI)—Attorney General Tom Clark said tonight that "we have the Communists scampering."

In one of the strongest public denunciations of the U. S. Communist party ever made by a Cabinet officer, Mr. Clark said the Reds work "stealthily . . . day and night to bring about chaos and confusion among our people."

HE told a banquet of the National Woman's Party that the Communists "are ever poised to carry out acts of the government, besmirching public officials and striving to destroy confidence in American leaders and our form of government."

"But," Mr. Clark said, "our people are now on guard. Today we have the Communists scampering."

The National Woman's Party was celebrating the 101st year of the campaign to bring about equal rights for women in politics and employment.
