Depicts Religious Subjects

The "Ecce Homo" on aquatint depicting Christ with the crown of thorns executed by Orfeo Vian, expresses the spirit of Holy Week.

Orfeo Vian, fifth-year student in the John Herron Art School, makes aquatint prints on the Herron presses.

Student From Italy Prefers Sacred Topics for Paintings

By ENMA RIVERS MILNER, Times Church Editor

A widely recognized student in his fifth year in the John Herron Art School says he prefers a religious subject to any other for his paintings and aquatints.

Orfeo Vian, the student, came to the United States from his native Italy nine years ago. He is 24. He looks eagerly forward to becoming a full-fledged United States citizen. Orfeo won't budge out of the city even briefly because he hopes soon to be called to receive his final papers.

But modern American life with all its worldly charms has not changed his taste nor his goal in his artist's career.

"Art deserves the greatest possible sincerity of treatment," he made clear in an interview. "Because I know religion better than any other field, I believe I can express myself more sincerely by using religious themes," he said.

Talks Like Hoosier

And yet no one could say this ruddy-cheeked, sandy-haired young man seems overly solemn or too pious. When he talks, fluently and without accent, you might think he was a Hoosier.

Orfeo was born to the Catholic faith and attended Catholic schools in Italy. He belongs to St. Anthony's Church, Indianapolis.

The lore of the church has stamped itself upon his consciousness since childhood. He loves it. It holds a profound meaning for him which he would like to pass on to others. You gather all this as you talk with him.

To judge by the reception given his efforts both in the United States and abroad, he is making progress toward his goal.

His aquatint, the "Ecce Homo," now is included in the Third National Print Annual in the Brooklyn Museum of Fine Arts, Brooklyn, N. Y. A magazine published in Paris has asked for it and six other places of his for publication. The editor chose Orfeo's name from illustrations of work included in the latest exhibition in the Pennsylvania Academy of Art, Philadelphia.

Explains Process

Just in case you, like this writer, have had no knowledge of the aquatint, here is Orfeo's brief definition: "It is very much like an etching in that it is made on metal. But the aquatint achieves tone in addition to the line of the etching." Making an aquatint involves an elaborate process which would make a story in itself.

Orfeo Vian is a former Technical High School student and attends John Herron on a scholarship. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Vittorio Vian, 615 S. Tibbs

Choirs to Tell Crucifixion Story in Song

Churches to Present 'Seven Last Words'

Choirs of the city will tell the story of the Crucifixion of Christ in much-loved cantatas throughout Holy Week beginning with Palm Sunday tomorrow.

A favorite composition is Du Bois "The Seven Last Words of Christ." The lines are the seven speeches Jesus made as he hung on the cross. The first expresses his great compassion for mankind:

"Father forgive them for they know not what they do." And the last rings down the curtain on the anguish and suffering of that first Good Friday. It runs: "And with a loud voice Jesus cried: It is finished."

In the First Friends Church, the choir and quartet directed by Susan Monte, will sing "The Seven Last Words" at 8:30 a. m. tomorrow. The Rev. Herbert H. Barker will direct the choir. The Rev. J. M. Barker will direct the choir. The Rev. J. M. Barker will direct the choir.

Suit Objects To Enumeration

Injunction Sought In Howard County

Times State Service
KOKOMO, Apr. 9.—An injunction prohibiting any future enumeration of males, provided for at 6-year intervals by the Indiana constitution as a basis for legislative reapportionment, is asked in a suit filed in Howard County Circuit Court.

The action was brought by Olin R. Holt, realtor and business man and a former Kokomo mayor. He alleges that the 1914 amendment to the U. S. constitution, providing for women's suffrage, nullifies the questioned section of the state constitution because the latter refers only to males.

"Needless Expense"

Mr. Holt contends the 6-year enumeration is a needless expense because the constitutional provision for legislative reapportionment has been ignored
