

Capehart Urges GOP Farm Aid

Sees 'Plowing Under of Bureaucratic Rule'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2 (UP)—Sen. Homer E. Capehart (R. Ind.) today looked for some "plowing under of bureaucratic controls" at the Republicans' forthcoming farm conference at Sioux City, Ia. He said in a statement that he is confident that the gathering, set for Sept. 23 and 24, "would do much to formulate a long-range agricultural program on the basis of the sound thinking of American farmers and not on the theoretical dreams of bureaucrats."

Sen. Capehart referred to the recent Democratic farm meeting in Des Moines, Ia., in which administration speakers called for acceptance of Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan's farm program. He said the Democrats tried to sell the farmers "a pig in a poke."

'Long a Farmer'
"We are going out to learn whether the farmers want to be regimented and dominated by bureaucrats," he said, "or whether they want to have sound, constructive government help without domination and regimentation."

"I have been a farmer since I was old enough to lift a pitchfork and help my dad. I know blamed well what we are going to hear from those dirt farmers when we get to Sioux City, and believe me, it isn't going to sound like they are going to take that first step toward working for bureaucrats."

"There should be some plowing under at Sioux City—plowing under of bureaucratic controls."

George Moran Kept
U. S. Laughing in '20s

OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 2 (UP)—Doctors said today that diabetes and a stroke caused the death of George Moran, one of the famed "Two Black Crows" comedy team which convulsed the nation in the '20s.

Mr. Moran, born in Elwood, Kas., as George Searcy in 1881, died in a hospital charity ward yesterday.

Mr. Moran and the late Charles E. Mack headlined vaudeville circuits from "boast to coast" and brought their blackface antics to George White's Scandals, the Ziegfeld Follies and to early radio programs.

Mr. Mack was killed in an automobile accident in 1934. After that, Mr. Moran teamed with many different partners and during World War II appeared with a USO show.

Inactive Recently
His sister, Mrs. Charles Stevenson, Denver, and a brother, Philip Searcy, Los Angeles, were at his deathbed.

Mr. Moran had been inactive in recent years although booking agents in San Francisco said he had been "making the rounds" of the agencies up until a few months ago.

Mr. Moran and Mr. Mack first met while they were doing separate vaudeville acts in Astoria, Ore. They met again in a New York musical show in 1917 and decided to team up as the "Two Black Crows" in 1921.

In a few months, they were headlining vaudeville acts throughout the country and playing in musical comedies on Broadway. They played in the Ziegfeld Follies, made records and eventually graduated into radio and motion pictures.

Mr. Moran was the "straight man" in the famous comedy team. It was he who made the term "goofus feathers" a household word during the 1920's.

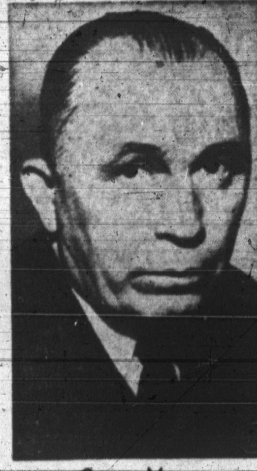

Mr. Moran always made the long speeches for the team, many of which were built around such proverbs as "the early bird catches the worm." This routine wound up with Mr. Mack furnishing the punch line, "Who wants a worm anyway?"

London Bobbies Called to Aid 'Viking Invasion'

LONDON, Aug. 2 (UP)—London's bobbies went to sea last night to protect Danish "Vikings" while they "invaded" Britain.

The bobbies took to their boats when seven students at Lambeth Hospital decided that no invasion could be real without resistance.

LED BY a young woman intern dressed as Queen Boadicea, the students painted their faces blue, as the ancient Britons, and set out to resist the Danes, who had sailed a replica of an ancient Viking ship from Denmark to Britain as a goodwill gesture.

Brandishing mops and ash can covers, the students were about to attack the Vikings with rotten tomatoes and bags of flour when the police intervened.
