Louisiana Naturalist to Be Buried in Family Plot

AYER ISLAND, La., Aug. 8 (UP)—Edward Avery McIlhenny, explorer, naturalist, and salt and tobacco magnate, was to be buried today in the family plot on this Louisiana island. He died at his mansion here yesterday at the age of 77.

His career in the public eye began in 1886, when he accompanied Admiral Robert Peary on a Polar expedition. Two years later he led his own party into the frozen north, and rescued a schooner crew that included novelist Jack London.

He devoted many years to creation of a game preserve on Avery Island, and was largely credited with saving the American white heron from extinction.

GAR Expects Only 3 Here Now

Centenarian Charles L. Chapelle's fall from a peach tree at Long Beach, Cal., may cut to three the attendance of Civil War veterans at the 83d and final encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Previously, Mrs. Irene Compton, secretary-general in charge of arrangements for the encampment here Aug. 28 to Sept. 1, had assurances from five veterans that they planned to attend.

But now, she said, it looks like Mr. Chapelle, 102, and Hiram R. Gale, 102, Seattle, Wash., probably won't be here. Mr. Gale has been in a hospital recently, she said.

Mrs. Compton believes that the veterans who will attend are James A. Hard, 108, Rochester, N. Y., who plans to fly; Joseph Clovese, 105, Pontiac, Mich., the only surviving Negro member of the G.A.R., and national commander in chief Theodore Fenland, 100, Portland, Ore.
