

Hawaii Tells Union to 'Stay Off Docks'

Recruits 700 Workers For Operation of Strike-Bound Port

HONOLULU, T. H., Aug. 11 (UPI)—The territorial government took over the entire strike-bound Hawaiian stevedoring industry today and Gov. Ingram Stainback warned that union interference in the operation of the docks would not be tolerated.

"Certain individuals are openly advocating violation of the law (seizure) which you passed in the interest of all the people," Gov. Stainback told the legislature. "I serve notice that such conduct will not be tolerated by this government."

A government spokesman said 700 longshoremen already had been recruited by the government and that the government stevedoring operations might be under way by Monday.

See a Solid Front

But officials of the striking International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union here and in mainland cities threatened that sympathy walkouts would maintain their solid strike front.

They said crewmen on inbound and outbound ships would not cross picket lines which the unions intended to throw around the government stevedoring operations.

To meet the latest union threat in the 103-day strike, the legislature started action which would ban picketing of government stevedoring operations.

Bridges Holds Firm

But despite the twin moves, Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's Union, maintained no ship would sail for the mainland.

He and other union officials also threatened an immediate court test on the validity of the law under which Gov. Stainback ordered the seizure of the seven struck stevedoring companies.

These were the latest developments in the walkout which has hit the island's economy hard and idled thousands of workers.

ONE: Gov. Stainback requested a joint session of the territorial Senate and House for the purpose of strengthening laws against picketing.

TWO: The Senate immediately convened a committee of the whole to consider a bill banning picketing of government operations.

THREE: Gov. Stainback signed executive orders to take over five stevedoring companies. (Two were taken over yesterday.)

FOUR: The Neusee passed on second reading five separate bills aimed at the strike. They prohibit picketing of homes and limitation of workers and their families, ban mass picketing or interference with the entrance or exits to public or private property, and provide machinery for regaining through the courts strikebound property aboard ships.

ton, fearful that one of the three unidentified charred corpses might be a missing relative or friend. Coroner Lyons today pleaded

The remains of victims and charred bits of personal effects were still in the temporary morgue in Bloomington armory, pending further identification attempts. The only aid to relatives were tags such as "Probably male," "Probably heavy" and dental charts which were made yesterday.

Robert Smith, attorney for the Greyhound company, went with Wayne Crammer, driver of the bus, to Bloomington this morning to give a statement to the coroner. The driver, burned as he helped passengers from the flaming vehicle, was released from the Bloomington hospital last night and returned to his home at 1112 Hoyt Ave.

Something Went Wrong.

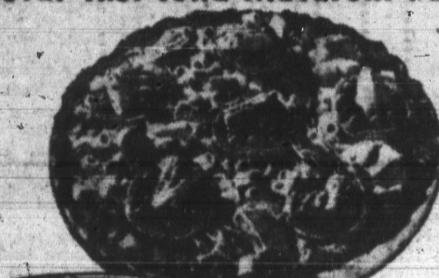

The company attorney said that statements taken by arm-investigators have failed to bring to light the cause of the crash.

"The driver doesn't know what happened," Mr. Smith said. "All he knows is that something went wrong in the right front corner of the bus."

He said the twisted metal skeleton of the big Indianapolis-to-Evansville bus was being held at the Greyhound garage at 555 Kentucky Ave. for the mechanical inspection. State police who were at the scene as the wreckage was removed said, however, that the complete destruction of the vehicle probably would doom any such investigation.

State police said their representatives will be alongside of company investigators in the mechanical check. The Interstate Commerce Commission inspector also will check the blackened wreckage.

State Reports 24 New Polio Cases

Predict Four More Weeks of Crisis

Indiana's polio toll climbed another 24 cases today as Public Health Service officials in Washington warned that the nation can expect four or five more bad weeks of the dread disease.

With the state's total reaching 399 cases, Dr. George M. Broth of the State Health Board said the outbreak was "no worse or no better" today.

The Indiana death toll climbed to 41.

Washington authorities reported 245 new cases last week, a 25 per cent increase over the previous week.

They said that during the past 22 years the peak number of polio cases has occurred in mid-September and that 1949, thus far, had followed "usual seasonal patterns."

Today units of the division were putting into practice the lessons learned in training last week and in armory training during the last year.

For a majority of the Hoosiers here, last night was their first experience with sleeping on the ground and under canvas.

During the night, each unit maintains tactical security guards as they would in combat zones, and division medical personnel keep a strict check on health and sanitation in the bivouac areas.

The FBI official said Knox was recently released from the federal penitentiary in Terre Haute after serving five years of a five-year sentence for robbing a Spencerville bank of $3874.

Shortly after his release, Mr. Foster said, Knox approached a relative of one of his fellow convicts and, posing as a federal police officer, said he could have the convict's sentence reduced so as to bring about his immediate release.

Knox was said to have told the inmate's relative he would need $300 to finance a trip to Washington and the relative supplied the money.

The victim of the fraud identified Knox in a police lineup in Ft. Wayne.

Judge will be 70 Aug. 15. Mr. McGauley did point out that Judge Baitzell and his predecessor, Judge Anderson, accounted for 47 years on that bench and both were Republicans. He discounted the efforts of some Republican lawyers in Indianapolis trying to keep the seat for their party.

Senators Not Up.

Denying that he discussed the senatorship, Mr. McGauley told White House reporters that whoever is nominated by the Democratic state convention will be able to defeat Republican Sen. Homer E. Capehart.

"Most of the Republicans do not want him," he added with a broad grin.

Rep. John R. Walsh, Anderson, was the principal critic of the policy of treating the Congressmen like they do not count. He told Mr. McGauley that they have received no recognition from the state or national Democratic organizations nor from the House leadership.

Before leaving for Indianapolis tonight, Mr. McGauley expects to see William Boyle, whom he has endorsed for national chairman, and newly appointed Attorney General J. Howard McGrath. He said the President appreciated the regularity of the Hoosier Congressmen in backing his program.

Several have been to the White House recently for personal chats with him.

To the suggestion that Gov. Schricker might take over the national committee post, Mr. McGauley laughed.

"I was elected for four years and I think I'll serve it out," he said.
