

Purdue Plans New $5 Million Campus Area

School to Serve Residents of the Calumet Region
HAMMOND, Sept. 8 (UP)—A $5 million campus to serve residents of the Calumet region will be built here by Purdue University, school officials announced today.

The school will concentrate first on building technical schools with the ultimate aim of offering full four-year courses in addition to technical and post-graduate training, Frederick L. Hovde, university president, said.

A campaign to raise $110,000 of the $610,000 needed for land purchase and construction of the first two buildings will begin immediately, officials announced at a dinner for university officials and civic and industrial leaders held last night at the Woodman Country Club here. The university will add the other half million.

Allocated $250,000 funds locally subscribed will be applied toward purchase of land.

The Ross-Ade Foundation, a non-profit subsidiary of the university, has allocated $250,000 to be applied on construction of the first building.

The university expects the first buildings to be constructed in the Woodman residential subdivision in southeastern Hammond, to be ready for the beginning of the 1950-51 school year.

Purdue has acquired 40 acres in the area for that purpose and has options on 136 acres more.

Purdue now maintains technical branches in rented quarters in Hammond and Gary for 1040 students but has found them inadequate. When the proposed campus is completed, 5000 students will be accommodated, Mr. Hovde said.

The campus will be known as the Calumet Center of Purdue University.
