Suit Proportioned for Three Figure Heights

By LOUISE FLETCHER, Times Woman's Editor

TALL GIRLS AND SHORT GIRLS don't have any trouble finding styles to please them, . . . but, they frequently complain, the styles that catch their eyes aren't scaled to fit their frames. One answer to their problem is a series of suits in Block's second-floor sports department. These are HMS proportioned suits in which the same style appears in three lengths for average, tall or short figures. The beige gabardine pictured, proportioned to fit the three heights, has the same style details in all three—easy-fitting jacket with trim collar, adjustable turnback cuffs, slanting pocket flaps and self-fabric buttons. Only variation is a reduction from four to three buttons for the shorter figure. The suit, $49.95, also comes in forest green, wine, Balenciaga and dark brown.

How to Play Canasta

2 Decks Used With 4 Jokers; Cards Dealt One At a Time

By WILLIAM E. MCKENNEY: America's Card Authority
Written for NEA Service

THE LAWS OF four-handed Canasta call for two regular decks of 52 cards each, plus four jokers.

In cutting for partners and seats, the ace ranks high and the deuce low. If a player draws a joker, he puts it to one side and draws another card.

The player on the right of the dealer shuffles, but the dealer signifies that the pack is frozen.

The ordinary rules applying to bridge and other card games for bridge hold true in Canasta.

The play consists of three parts: one, the draw; two, the meld; (optional); three, the discards.

The cards are dealt to each player one at a time. After each player has received 11 cards, the deck is placed on the table, preferably in a box or tray, and becomes the stock pile. The top card of the stock pile is turned over and placed in another box or tray, and this pile is referred to as the pack, or discard pile.

Rules of Dealing

If the up-card is a joker, deuce or red tray, it is removed from the box or tray and slid under the edge of the box or tray so that it is visible to all players, and again the top card of the stock pile is turned face up and put in the other box or tray.

If another joker, deuce or red tray is turned up, the next card from the stock pile is turned up to cover it, and this process is continued until some card other than a joker, deuce or red tray is turned up.

The joker, deuce or red tray that has been slid under the edge of the box containing the pack is required to draw from the stock pile.

TOMORROW: More on four-handed play.
