How to Play Canasta—Winner Needs to Overcome Fixed Hurdles Along Course

By WILLIAM E. MCKENNEY, America's Card Authority

THIS ARTICLE GIVES a few pointers on Canasta. Canasta is like an obstacle race. To reach the finish line, you must get past certain fixed hurdles on the course; to win, you must make better time than your competitors.

You are likely to fall by the wayside if you fail to keep watch on both the obstacles and the competitors. The fixed hurdles are:

(a) Making the initial meld; (b) Getting the pack; (c) Completing one or more Canastas;

(d) Getting rid of the last card. Sometimes—with an assist from Dame Fortune—you can hurdle two or three of these barriers, but you may get the pack in making your initial meld; you may go out with a concealed hand, encompassing (a), (c) and (d) at once.

Naturally, your chances of winning the race, or making a big profit, are greatly increased by any such telecasting of the course.

But, most of the time, you have to take the hurdles one by one. You have to be prepared to deal separately with the special difficulties thrown up around each by the rules of the game.

MAYBE LOSER

At the same time, you want to outdistance another partnership or other players. To some extent, you can enhance the difficulties for them.

It is as though—to keep up the analogy—you were allowed to push boulders in their path. But in so doing, you slow yourself up, and on net you may turn out to be the loser.

Getting the pack. All experience goes to show that the paramount object is to get the pack. This statement may sound

TOMORROW: Pointers on "getting the pack."

The Doctor Says—Hormones Aid Arthritis

New Remedy Still Not Fully Understood

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M. D.

MANY ARTICLES already have been written about the remarkable effects in rheumatoid (the crippling) arthritis and rheumatic fever of a hormone originally obtained from the adrenal gland known as compound E, or cortisone.

This hormone and another obtained from the pituitary gland known as ACTH appear to relieve the symptoms of rheumatoid arthritis, rheumatic fever and gout.

They do this promptly and apparently almost completely. Why they do it, however, is not well understood as yet.

IN MOST CASES the symptoms for which compound E or cortisone is given return just as badly as before immediately or soon after the injections are stopped.

Also, no one yet knows how much of these hormones should be given or how long they can be continued with safety to the patient.

In other words, it is not yet certain whether cortisone is safe or not. It is given in quantities which will produce relief or whether it can be given for long periods of time without producing other conditions as bad or worse than those which one is trying to relieve.

It cannot be emphasized too much also that cortisone is just not available except in extremely small quantities.

Teen Problems—Finish the Jobs You Start

By JEAN

ARE YOU strong for starting big projects—and weak at the finish? Do you undertake a major reorganization of your room, then leave piles of unsorted stuff in the corners? Do you plan a party and foul up the finishing touches? Or how about that club you sponsored? Did you lose interest and let it fall to pieces?

It's fine to have pet projects. Kids who initiate things are the leaders of the gang. But unfinished business is poor business. It's a sign of a disorganized mind and a slapdash character. It's irksome to others, too.

YES FOLKS lose confidence in the quick starters who never carry through. Schoolmates shy away from grandiose schemes they know will never work. Parents view with impatience their offsprings' ambitious plans and innovations.

Teenagers tend to bite off more than they can chew. They don't stop to count the cost—in labor, time and attention.

Doing over your private quarters is a swell idea, but the hours of work will be dreary and dull. Putting on a play or starting a club is a glamorous stunt, but the actual execution takes patience and persistence.

Before you undertake a job, think it through. Plan what you know you can accomplish. Be a starter and a finisher, as well.

Club Sets Meeting

The 11th anniversary meeting of the Liberty Garden Home-makers Club will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the home of the Rev. Clive McGuire, pastor of the Garden Baptist Church.

Parents of the engaged couples are Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Reese, 3131 E. 38th St., and Robert L. Mulhall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis G. Mulhall, 353 Burgess Ave., were married Sept. 3 in the St. Joan of Arc Catholic Church. The Rev. Fr. William Buhmeier officiated.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Robert J. Arn, Massillon, O., and the bridesmaids were Miss Dolores Crone, Massillon, and Miss Trudy Mulhall. The best man was Francis Mulhall and the ushers were Mr. Arn, E. Berry Smith, Edward Sexton and Robert Meiners.

The couple will be at home in the Meadowbrook Plaza later this month. Mr. Mulhall attended Butler University.

Joins Faculty

CHICAGO—Elizabeth Bentley, confessed Soviet spy courier, will join the faculty of Mundelein College, a Catholic Girls' school, this fall. She will teach political science.
