Group Hears
Educator
Increased Atomic
Output Urged
"Now that we know the Russians have the secret of the atom, the interim of security is over," Dr. John Wilkinson Taylor, University of Louisville president, declared here today.

Dr. Taylor was guest speaker at the President's Day luncheon opening the 58th year of the Indianapolis Council of Women in the Columbia Club. Mrs. Thad R. Clarke, incoming president, was honored.

Striking a personal note, the educator, who for two years sat as American delegate with Russians, British and French in weekly meetings of the Four Power Education Committee, said:

"In my opinion we should step up our stockpiling of atomic weapons as well as increase production of our long range bombers. More atom bombs and more B-50's—this is the kind of thing the Politburo in Moscow understands."

"The obvious corollary is arms aids to the western European democracies. I say this from a purely selfish point of view—I prefer to see anyone else's hand shed before our own boys have to get shot. The closer we keep the frontier of communism to the western borders of the Soviet Union, the longer time for preparation we will have if and when a strike comes."

'Leaders Are Ruthless'
Dr. Taylor described the leaders of the Russian Communist Party as "absolutely ruthless in gaining their ends. I believe they will never agree to international atomic control. On the contrary, they regard every proposal for compromise or a common meeting ground as a display of weakness."

"Ivan-in-the-street" is our only hope, he told the representatives of more than 200 local clubs. Getting the truth about how the rest of the world lives to the man in the Russian street, he said, was the only real short of war, of securing "One World."

"Remember there are possibly five to ten million card-carrying Communists in the USSR who in turn control the lives of another 160 million people. It is this 160 million in which our hope lies. To me, this means not one Voice of America, but a hundred Voices of America, blaring from all corners via radio waves to get the truth to 'Ivan-in-the-street.'"

Names of council members who will be on duty daily as hostesses during the Festival of Dairy and Related Foods opening here Saturday were announced. The festival is part of the International Dairy Exposition.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy W. Bandy, 5230 W. Martha St., announce the engagement of their daughter, Wanda Lou, to John W. Taylor, son of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Theodore Taylor, 1417 S. Lynhurst Drive.

Miss Nanette Newlin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Newlin, Robinson, Ill., and Robert Feeder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley S. Feeder, 2829 N. Meridian St., were married Sept. 10 in Robinson.

My Day— Trygve Lie, UN, Outstc Jing Example of Brave Leadership

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Recently I went to the dinner given by the American Association of the United Nations in honor of Secretary-General Trygve Lie, who received the award this year for "courageous leadership and distinguished service in furthering the ideals of the United Nations."

Anyone who has come in contact with Mr. Lie feels his deep devotion to the organization. A patriot devoted to his own country, he yet feels strongly that the United Nations is the organization through which all countries can work for world peace, and that it is only as we work together that our own countries can possibly hope to be saved in this period of manifold difficulties. I think he has achieved a sense of greater loyalty to the organization than to any individual country, even his own. That is the ideal, of course, which all the people who work in the United Nations strive to achieve. One need not give up one's love for one's own country; but one's loyalty to the United Nations must come first, because it is through that organization that our own countries must ultimately hope for peace and security.

It is not always easy for men to feel this depth of loyalty to an organization, and not to a country. But it is what we must all try for in the present situation, since on our attitude, I think, depends the ultimate ability of the United Nations to serve all nations, large and small.

Clever Cover

I thought the cover of the program at the dinner for Mr. Lie was very clever. It showed a tree grown up at Lake Success and from its branches sprouted leaves bearing the names of the various activities, while Mr. Lie, a sturdy farmer in overalls, with a water hose in his hand and a large farmer's straw hat to protect him from the sun, poured a steady flow of water on a cat and dog who looked anything but peacefully at each other!

I also spoke for the American Federation of the Physically Handicapped. This organization is trying to awaken people to the need for open avenues of employment to the handicapped, many of whom can be employed more profitably than those without physical handicaps. But employers are often frightened by what they think is going to be a liability, and highly-trained people, who need only a little thought on the part of an industrial manager, are kept out of a job because of a prejudice.

Many physically handicapped people, too, in overcoming their handicap and becoming skilled in some form of work, discipline themselves so well that their characters benefit by the fight they have to put up in order to meet the world and overcome difficulties. If employers only knew it, they are often getting something more priceless even than the skills of trained employees for a man of character who has learned to live uncomplainingly and give the best that he has with courage, may bring into the lives of his fellow workers an intangible value that will have very tangible results.
