Canasta— Rules for 2-Handed Canasta

By WILLIAM E. MCKENNEY, America's Card Authority

TWO-HANDED Canasta uses two decks of cards with four jokers, just as in four-handed. The rules are the same except that you deal 15 cards and you must have two canastas to go out. The deal alternates.

Here are some questions and answers on two-handed Canasta. Question: Our group of players thinks it is impossible to get two canastas with only 15 cards. So we draw two cards at a time. Is this becoming a common practice?

Answer: No, it is not. This spoils the two-handed Canasta game. In the first place, you have to make two discards. Your opponent will want to know if he has two chances at the pack. You will find that the present two-handed game is quite fascinating if you employ the right tactics.

Question: Do the same minimum meld requirements hold true in two-handed Canasta as in four-handed? In other words, if I am minus, do I need only 15 points? If I am over 1500, do I need 90 points, and over 3000 do I need 120 points?

Answer: Yes. This rule and all the other rules for four-handed Canasta are the same.

Question: In two-handed Canasta is it important that I get my minimum meld down as quickly as possible?

Answer: No. That is not one of the strategic points of play in two-handed Canasta. In the two-handed game a player will seldom make his initial meld unless he can pick up the pack. The object of the two-handed game is to get control of the pack. If you do, you can score from 2000 to 4000 points in one hand.

Question: In two-handed Canasta, if I hold only one wild card,

Kale Urged In Winter Diet

Vegetable Is Source
Of A and C Vitamins

By JANE STAFFORD

Science Service Medical Writer

FAMILIES that have not had kale on their menus have been missing a good bit, nutritionists tell us. Northerners especially would be wise to get acquainted with this vegetable since it comes on the market during winter and spring when other green leafy vegetables are scarce.

Studies of the nourishing value of this green and of appetizing ways of cooking it have recently been made at the Connecticut Experiment Station at Storrs, Conn. Kale rates high as a source of vitamins A and C and of essential minerals, calcium, or lime, and iron. But the Connecticut scientists give it a special boost as an inexpensive source of vitamin C. This anti-scurvy vitamin is one found abundantly in oranges and other citrus fruits and in tomatoes and raw cabbage as well as in other fruits and vegetables. In winter, diets of northern families are especially likely to run low on this vitamin, so they are advised to take advantage of the good supply furnished by kale.

SMALL leaves of kale are even richer in vitamin C than the large leaves. The Connecticut scientists found. They suggest stripping the leaves from their tough midribs and then tearing or cutting them in inch-size pieces for cooking.

Further cooking directions to make kale appetizing and conserve its vitamin C are as follows: Boil nine minutes in enough water to come half-way to the top of the kale. If the kale has been tenderized in the field by heavy frost, it is better when boiled only six minutes. These best cooking times were learned by taste tests made by 50 college students and teachers in Connecticut.

Cooking in a covered or uncovered pan does not make much difference in the favor. About 40 per cent of the vitamin C in the kale was dissolved in the cooking water, the scientists found. They therefore advise saving and using the water drained off after cooking. It probably could be used for flavoring soups and gravies, or made into a cream sauce in which to serve cooked, chopped kale.

My Day— Civilian Undercover Agents Deserve Fair Compensation

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK, Oct. 24—That is an interesting story about the girl photographer who acted as an undercover agent for the FBI, and testified at the trial of the 11 convicted Communists here. But I am a little bit surprised if our government accepts the help of someone who undertakes a considerably risky job for it and then it does not make some kind of decent financial arrangements to compensate not only for the risk that was run but for the difficulties that the individual, on returning to normal living, finds in getting employment.

That part of the story struck me as very odd because I am quite sure that the FBI people who ordinarily work on these jobs get decent pay, and if you are going to pick up civilians to do the same kind of work they certainly should get no less pay.

The Secret Service and the FBI in this country do such remarkable good jobs that it is always a surprise when you hear something that you don't think is compatible with the realities of the situation.

We drove down early from Hyde Park to Lake Success and during the morning session we finished the discussion on the Polish item that dealt with the treatment of refugee labor. This time a few accusations were leveled against the United States. It probably has occurred to the Soviet bloc that we haven't let in as many people as seem to want to come, and our Congress has refused again to pass a displaced persons bill that would have made it possible for a reasonably small number to come to our shores.

Study Value Of College

AAUW Report Lists
Ideas on Education

The American Association of University Women announces the findings from questionnaires sent to 30,000 members. The women were asked to evaluate the value of their college education in later life.

Nearly one-third of the membership answered the questionnaires. The members suggest that a college education should consist of training and experience which are closely related to life after college.

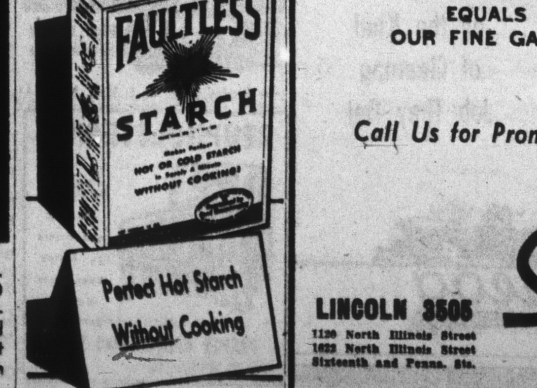

They also recommend that a college education should be broad and flexible enough to stimulate the maximum development of each individual, preparing each in the fullest way possible for life after college.
