TRY IT

MAP OUT A STUDY CORNER

Have you been trying to get your homework without having a definite place to study? Everyone who has lessons to do at home should have a corner set aside with the proper space and tools to do good work. It is not necessary to have an expensive desk with drawers and compartments, but it is important that you have a surface large enough to spread out your books and papers or to draw a map. Very little studying can be done without a few reference books such as a dictionary or an atlas. If you have no drawers in your study table, a cigar box can be painted and placed on the back of the desk to hold pens, pencils, crayons and erasers. A bright shaded light placed in such a position that you are not working in your own shadow or with the glare of the light in your eyes is most important. Decorate the walls of your study corner with road maps to use for reference, and map your way through your studies. TOMORROW—DANGLE PRIZES ON BOBBING APPLES.
