TRY IT

COMPARE WILD TURKEYS WITH DOMESTIC TURKEYS

Benjamin Franklin thought so much of the stately wild turkey that he wanted it to be our national bird. The wild turkey at one time was plentiful and was a favorite game bird of the pioneers. Today it is still choice game, but there are not many places where it is found in abundance.

I have seen them in Florida, North Carolina and Texas and know them to be extremely alert. They do not have the white tail of the domestic turkey which is descended from the wild turkey of southern Mexico. The wild turkey also has a smaller head, larger eyes, and a more streamlined body than our domestic ones.

It is a real thrill to hear the clear and shrill call of a fine male turkey during the early spring, for his call is more bugle like than his domestic cousin and can be heard for miles.

When we give thanks for such a fine bird served on Thanksgiving Day we know that we are eating a truly American bird for which many of our forefathers hunted for the same occasion.
