

Russia Denies U. S. Charge Of North China Grab

Call Acheson Statement 'Absurd, Monstrous'

'First Doubts It's Genuineness,' Asserts Vishinsky in Report to Foreign Press

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky today accused U. S. Secretary of State Dean Acheson of "unceremonious lying."

He angrily denied that Russia is annexing northern China.

Mr. Vishinsky denounced Mr. Acheson as Foreign Minister Chou En-lai of the Chinese central government arrived in Moscow to join his president, Mao Tze-tung, in cementing Chinese-Soviet friendship under the new Chinese regime.

Mr. Acheson's speech before the Washington Press Club contained "not one word of truth," Mr. Vishinsky said in Moscow.

Mr. Acheson charged that the Soviet Union already has annexed Outer Mongolia and is adding Manchuria, Inner Mongolia and Sinkiang province.

U. S. Officials Silent

In Washington the State Department officials withheld comment for the time being today on Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky's charges against Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

Mr. Vishinsky replied in a statement given to foreign correspondents by Yurii Frantzev, chief of the foreign ministry's press department.

He said Mr. Acheson's charge was "so absurd and monstrous that we first doubted its genuineness."

"He (Acheson) said all those absurdities in order to put a decent face to a bad game, to blame Soviet foreign policy and at the same time to place on the USSR the fault for the collapse of his own foreign policy, Mr. Vishinsky said.

Any country receiving the Tibetan missions "will be regarded as harboring hostile intentions toward China," the spokesman said.

Divorcee Shot Five Times by Former Suitor

Chased Up Stairs In NY Central Freight Office

A rejected suitor who broke into sofa when stretchers-bearers carried out his critically wounded former girl friend today told police he remembered nothing about the shooting.

The Socialist Le Populaire said Americans forget that the longer a dictatorship lasts, the harder it is to set up a really democratic regime.

The newspaper L'Aube, official newspaper of the popular Republican movement, said:

"Can a dictator offer the essential liberties to the people he oppresses? It seems to us that such a thing never has been seen. But it is exactly what Mr. (Secretary of State Dean) Acheson seems to expect from Generalissimo Franco."

Taipei Madame Chiang Kai-shek visited two hospitals for wounded Nationalist veterans today in her first public appearance since her return from the United States.

In the morning she visited more than 100 patients in the National Defense Ministry Hospital and in the afternoon she went to the Peitou Convalescent Hospital in the mountains outside Taipei. The Peitou Hospital houses 400.

On her morning visit she presented the hospital with a banner carrying the motto of her program to whip up enthusiasm for the defense of Formosa against Communist attack.

Manila U. S. roving Ambassador Philip C. Jessup held a press conference today, but declined to answer questions on the American attitude toward Formosa.

"The only kind of an answer on Formosa that would interest you is one I cannot make," he told newsmen.

Mr. Jessup discussed the visit of Chinese Foreign Minister Chou En-lai to Moscow, where Chinese Communist Leader Mao Tse-tung has been visiting for five weeks.

Berlin Gen. Maxwell Taylor today ordered the return to the Russians of the German railway administration building.

German police seizure of the building had caused the Soviets to insist at reimposing the Berlin blockade.

Gen. Taylor's order to return the headquarters to the Soviet rail administration apparently resolved the dispute.

The Russians had made it clear in imposing some restrictions on traffic, notably a slowdown in elevated railway service and the stopping of some trucks operating between Berlin and West Germany, that they were doing so because of the seizure of the building in the American sector here.

It was held by the Russians under four-power agreement giving them control over the Berlin railroads. The Russians largely had vacated the building after the Berlin rail strike last year. The German police took it on the contention that the hundreds of workers there had been an accident.

Police said that Mrs. Brown, a divorcee, met Lockhart, who resided at R. R. 6, Box 264, where he was employed at New York Central. Officials said he was discharged for drunkenness six months ago. He had been attending Lain Business College and started working Monday at Polar Ice & Fuel Co. Lockhart had been married but was divorced in September.

Charges of assault and battery with intent to murder were continued to Feb. 17 on the request of detectives as he appeared before Judge Pro Tem. Charles Steger in Municipal Court 3 this morning.

'Never Loved Him,' Says Cairo Girl

Father Denies Farouk Ordered Her to Jilt Suitor

she is our only child, we being a family of three, including my wife.

"Narriman is an old-fashioned girl who never has gone out to dances or clubs. Her chief form of amusement is going to the cinema with me. She was 16 on Oct. 25, 1949.

"One day about the beginning of November a distant acquaintance of the family told me he knew a certain Saki Hashem who was on leave in Cairo from the United States and who wanted to find another job.

"I can understand that you want people to say what they think about your column because, after all, that is freedom of speech. But constitutional rights can be stretched too far."

"Mrs. J. says your husband is to be pitied. 'Mrs. J.' should be pitied for expressing things the way she does. What if she were so unfortunate as to live in a country where people are not free to ask or give advice and speak their minds?"

"She criticized people with German blood in their veins. I have quite a bit of that blood and I'm not ashamed of it."

"She couldn't have such a perfect home life with a temper or whatever that is she showed in her letter. As for her wager that your husband is the mousy type, I'd like to see the man married to her type. I bet he's afraid to open his mouth for fear she'll stick her foot in it."

"I made inquiries about him, and found he had a good reputation and was regarded as a man of intellect. Around the middle of November I told my acquaintance I would like to see Mr. Hashem. So he came to my house. He made a good impression upon me."

"He said he was in a hurry to get married as he was due to leave for the United States early in December. That was the first time Narriman saw Mr. Hashem."

"Our Oriental traditions do not allow our children to disobey their parents' wishes regarding marriage, and we are a conservative family. I told my daughter she was shortly to become engaged to Mr. Hashem."

Daughter Changed

"From then on, Narriman was a changed girl. She always was crying, and became very despondent. Eventually I asked my wife, 'Isn't the girl happy?'

"My wife and her sister then spoke to Narriman and got the impression she did not know what love and marriage was all about, and that she had no particular feeling for Mr. Hashem."

"Some days later Narriman came to me and said, 'Daddy, why do you want me to marry so soon?'

"Her uncle, a captain in the Royal Egyptian Air Force, arrived in Cairo and said to me, 'Look, brother, you are wrecking your daughter's life. She doesn't like Mr. Hashem.'

"Sometimes just a different viewpoint, is all that's needed. We get so wrapped up in ourselves and need a good friend to show us a way to forget self. Then, my wife and I would have to take Mrs. Manners' advice."

"By this time specialists had sold me that I did not have coronary thrombosis after all, that it was only my liver. I began to get better. Eventually one morning I asked Narriman point blank:

"Do you wish to marry Mr. Hashem? Don't be shy. Give me a frank answer."

"Narriman replied, 'No, I don't want to marry him. I have no wife. We hope it is not so easy for them to criticize us.'

MRS. A. INDIANA.

"That was on Dec. 2. I canceled the reception that was to be held—incidentally, quite a small affair and not the big thing that the foreign papers have said it was to be, for we are ordinary middle class family."

"I then went to see Mr. Hashem's father and told him my daughter was too young to marry and that I could not consent to her marriage. I wished Mr. Hashem all the happiness."

"Mr. Sadek paused here. He had been speaking gravely, but then proceeded to speak with even greater seriousness."

"None of my family, including Narriman, ever heard of or saw Zaki Hashem before the early days of November 1949, and the whole incident was over within three weeks."

"The 'akd' (Egyptian word for contract) which usually is signed by the two parties on such occasions was not even drawn up."

"This correspondent then questioned Mr. Sadek to attempt to clarify outstanding points."

"I have heard that your daughter might eventually become engaged to King Farouk," I said. "Is this true?"

"She is free," the father answered, "and was always free to marry another man if she so wished."

"No Orders From King."

"Did you ever receive orders or instructions directly or indirectly to give your daughter to the king?"

"None whatever," he said. "I repeat, none whatever."

"It has been reported that your daughter has been virtually a prisoner in your house. Is that the case?"

"It is absolutely untrue," he replied. "She has complete freedom and is going to the cinema just as she always used to do."

"The correspondent then asked Mr. Sadek again about his daughter's future life and Mr. Sadek replied:

"I want my daughter to be happy. If destiny decides that Narriman shall eventually be married to our king, that will be the cause of her happiness, and it will be an honor for us all."
