WITH CHICKEN high on the new plentiful list, let's dig up a few different recipes.

Years ago, Solari's Restaurant in San Francisco grew famous for its chicken country-style. Ah, succulent memory! Cut a young broiler-fryer (three to three and one-half pounds) into eight pieces and marinate in cold milk with a clove of garlic for about half an hour. Drain, dry well and season.

Melt butter in a skillet and delicately—oh, so delicately—brown the pieces and then transfer to a moderate oven and finish cooking. Remove those golden nuggets to a large hot platter.

In the pan, you'll have a combination of butter and flecks of chicken skin. Chop it—it will enrich your life.

Four in a pint of heavy cream. Place pan over direct heat and bring the cream and butter and little flecks to a boil and let simmer until the gravy begins to thicken without aid of flour.

Season with a little cayenne and serve over the chicken. Sprinkle a little in any bean dish you're cooking. Its German name means "bean herb." Dill, chives, and parsley you probably know. Sow chives and parsley seed right away, dill about mid-April. Sprinkle chopped dill leaves on half a head of steamed cabbage with butter for a dish that's out of this world.

Sunday's Menu

BREAKFAST: Orange juice, fried eggs and bacon, raisin muffins, butter or fortified margarine, coffee milk.

DINNER: Chicken country style with real cream gravy, sweet potato pudding, canned lima beans, wedges of iceberg lettuce with French dressing, apple pie, coffee, milk.

SUPPER: Sliced ham, potato salad, grated carrots and cabbage salad, toasted muffin halves, butter or fortified margarine, canned peaches, tea, milk.

Jewelry Changes for Spring

Important fashion news isn't limited, these days, to new skirt lengths or hat angles. Things are happening, too, to accessories and jewels. Gold jewelry leads the field and Monet's "Copley Square," a five-strand necklace of gold chains, reflects the trend. Graded in length to make a chain bib, the necklace is interspersed with tiny gold balls, a delicate design to enhance the off-shoulder neckline for varied occasions whether in rustling, stiff fabrics for after-dark or bare-topped sundresses. There's a bracelet to match. Necklace $10; bracelet $5, plus tax, Ayres' street-floor costume jewelry department.—By L. F.

Plans Visit to IU Clinic

BLOOMINGTON, Mar. 31—Grand officers of the Psi Iota Xi Sorority will visit the Indiana University Speech and Hearing Clinic tomorrow. They will make plans with Dr. Robert L. Milisen, director of the clinic, for the traveling clinic for children with speech and hearing defects which the sorority will again conduct during the coming summer in co-operation with the university.

The Psi Iota Xi Sorority will contribute $2400 toward the summer traveling clinic which will be available to all Indiana communities.

Planning to attend the meeting at the university Saturday are Mrs. J. D. Young, Columbus, Ind., president; Mrs. Wendell D. Reed, Indianapolis, vice president; Mrs. Emmerson Hougland, Franklin, secretary; Mrs. Earl Lawson, Vincennes, treasurer; Mrs. Leah Flint, Indianapolis, adviser; Mrs. Dorothy Doles, Greensburg, editor; Mrs. Charles Weddle, Lebanon, conductress; Mrs. L. J. Martin, Goshen, charity chairman; Mrs. Dorothy Foster, Rushville, symphony chairman; Miss Jean O'Rourke, Ft. Wayne, northern province chairman; Mrs. Kenneth Peterson, Portland, central province chairman; Mrs. Glenn Clark, North Vernon, southern province chairman, and Mrs. Glenn Marshall, Indianapolis, stationer.

The program for children with speech and hearing defects by the Psi Iota Xi Sorority was first started in 1938 and for the first three years the organization maintained a traveling clinic similar to the one which will be conducted during the summer. For the next eight years the sorority contributed $2000 or more each year to the resident Speech and Hearing Clinic which is permanently maintained on the Indiana University campus.

Last summer the sorority resumed its traveling clinic. Through means of the original traveling clinic sponsored by the Psi Iota Xi Sorority, 6000 Indiana school children received speech and hearing tests and 130,000 received group hearing tests. Approximately 200 children with speech and hearing defects are treated annually at the resident clinic at the university. The average stay at the clinic ranges from two to nine months.

A speech pathologist, two speech and hearing therapists and one clinical psychologist will make up the traveling clinic unit this summer. Under the plan, the state will be divided into areas. In the center of each area will be a Psi Iota Xi town where a clinic will be held and all persons to be examined from that area will come to that center.

During the past summer the clinic accepted for examination 406 handicapped persons from 42 counties.

This is two spreads in one, a decorator special with a neat new way of covering pillows. Make the two-faced top of quilting by the yard in a plain color. Face it with a print, or decide that the quilting should be patterned and the facing plain. At the point where the pillows begin, reverse the plain and pattern so that the end turned down over the pillows matches the rest of the spread.

New Design Has Seam in Front

PITY the poor male. If he once HAD any ideas on whether he was coming or going, he's due for an upset.

Now it's a hosiery manufacturer who is "gumming up the works." The Gotham hosiery outfit (as if a pair of pretty gams weren't already confusing enough to the average male) has just introduced stockings with seams in front.

The cobwebby nylons, known as "Front Liners," have a delicate dark seam bisecting the full length from top to toe. They are a direct reversal of the usual construction. They have no seam at all in back.

New design is a part of the hosiery makers' efforts to turn out exciting and leg-flattering hosiery now that skirts are shorter again and underpinnings more in the public eye.

In soft, rich spring tones to accompany spring costume colors, the "Front Liners" are $1.95 at Wesson's.

DISHING
the DIRT

By MARGUERITE SMITH
Times Garden Editor

Q—I'd like to start raising a few herbs this year. Would you suggest some that are not too difficult? Also how do I use them after I've raised them?

A—Basil is absolutely first choice. Sow seed of any variety of basil after ground gets warm, mid-May. Or start seed indoors now if you prefer. It grows quickly. Use the leaves, chopped, on top of tomato juice, or sprinkled in soups or mixed in ground beef patties. As you get acquainted with various herbs you can use them for steak sauces, for marinating fish and many trick dishes. Summer savory is easy to raise. Sow seed outdoors in warm weather. Sprinkle a little in any bean dish you're cooking. Its German name means "bean herb." Dill, chives, and parsley you probably know. Sow chives and parsley seed right away, dill about mid-April. Sprinkle chopped dill leaves on half a head of steamed cabbage with butter for a dish that's out of this world.
