

First 2 Hoosier Army Reserve Units are Called

Terre Haute, Bloomington Groups Due Aug. 19; Indianapolis Unit Expects Summons

By GALVY GORDON

The first two Indiana Organized Reserves Corps units to be pressed into federal service in the Korean crisis were alerted last night.

They are the 375th Chemical Smoke Generating Company, stationed at Terre Haute, and 615th Quartermaster Refrigerator Company (fixed) at Bloomington. Call to duty is effective Aug. 19.

Ranking Indiana Military District officers in session late yesterday day, said an Indianapolis-based unit would probably be called up in a few hours.

Meanwhile, seven other Indiana ORC units were being considered in the Pentagon late yesterday for "call-up to active service not later than Wednesday." Some of these under study units include WACs and some are stationed in Indianapolis, it was believed.

Orders By Phone

Telephone orders alerting the western and southern Indiana Army reserve units were received at Ft. Harrison shortly after 3 p.m. from 5th Army Headquarters, Chicago.

First Lt. Herbert A. Mason, commanding officer of the all-colored chemical company in Terre Haute, notified of the alert said:

"We're in desperate straits for men. I hope we can get enough recruits to come up to strength before the 19th."

A similar appeal for recruits was voiced by Capt. John W. Boyer, instructor at the Indiana University school of business and commanding officer of the quartermaster unit.

Col. Peter C. Bullard, chief of the Indiana Military District, said recruits could apply to ORC instructors of the units or to the unit headquarters. "We hope they can go into federal service at full strength," the colonel said.

7000 Hoosiers At Atterbury

Guardsmen Face Siege of Work

(Continued From Page One)

"taan." The nickname followed 19 days of bloody combat when the division ousted Japanese troops off the island.

And like most other Hoosier Guardsmen, Pfc. Nelson has little contact with his commanding officer, Maj. Gen. Jesse E. McIntosh of Tipton.

But he knows that Gen. McIntosh rose from buck private to combat commander of a battalion during his 33 years with the National Guard and later to major general.

Other Activities

Other developments in Hoosier manpower:

ONE: United States Attorney Matthew E. Welsh, acting on orders from the Attorney General, warned the 72 Southwest Marion County Board 52 registrants, called up for physical examination between 7:30 and 8 a.m. tomorrow, they face "possible prosecution" and heavy penalties if they fail to answer the call.

TWO: Plans were being studied by Brig. Gen. Robinson Hitchcock for boasting number of draft boards in state to 296 in the event of all-out mobilization and registration of all men up to the age of 45.

THREE: Official standings of the 13 states of the 5th Army region in the "speeded-up" recruiting drive, showed Indiana leading closest contender, Michigan, by 3 per cent, with others in the field lagging about 30 per cent. Sgt. Henry Hawes, state Army Air Force recruiting center here, said July enlistments stood near 800 last night compared to July "target" figure of 571.

FOUR: Lt. Col. William C. Smith, commanding officer of the 16th Infantry Marine Battalion, ordered to "move out" to Camp Pendleton, Cal., Aug. 18, requested relatives of battalion members who are out of town to contact them and instruct them to report to USMC Training Center, 2830 E. Riverside Drive, for "muster" on the following schedule:

Headquarters Company, 7:30 p.m. tomorrow.

A Company, 7:30 p.m., Wednesday.

B Company, 7:30 p.m., Tuesday.

Hoosier Driver Charged With Manslaughter

HENDERSON, Ky., July 29 (UPI)—Donald Caldwell, Evansville, Ind., was charged with manslaughter today by state police in connection with a traffic accident which killed a woman.

The victim was Mrs. Lotta Williams, 51, Greenup, Ill. Her son, William, was critically injured, and his wife, Peggy, and Caldwell were both hurt seriously.

Police said Caldwell swung his automobile into the path of the Williams' car near the entrance to Audubon State Park near here.

Indiana Guardsmen Start Moving Out of Armory for Maneuvers

Capt. Edgar F. Weincke Jr., commanding officer of headquarters, headquarters company, 151st Infantry is shown carrying his gear out of the armory at 711 N. Pennsylvania St. to load up for Camp Atterbury.

M/Sgt. Gordon Self, of headquarters, headquarters detachment, of the Indiana National Guard, is adjusting the rear vision mirror on his squat weapons carrier in front of the armory at 711 N. Pennsylvania St.

While waiting to take off for maneuvers at Camp Atterbury troopers of the 915th medical ambulance company of the 38th Infantry Division ran through a field problem at the armory at 1915 N. Pennsylvania St. in the stretcher playing "hit" is Pfc. Joe Kimbrell. Left to right taking care of him are Pfc. Radford Moore, Sgt. George Woods, Cpl. Harold Bratton and Cpl. James Martin.

Don't Get Hot Up—

Summer Got You Down? Here's How to Enjoy It

Eat Less, Wear Less, Work Less, Swear Less, State Health Official Advises

By TED KNAP

Are you irritable and frustrated? Do you feel listless in the afternoon? Does your shirt stick and make you worry that you're only half safe?"

Don't rush for the little liver pill box, friend, you're just like the rest of us. You are suffering from summer. And in Indianapolis, best during "dog days." That means easy on the spuds, less fatty meat, and more salt and water. Housewives should be happy to find this excuse for a cool supper.

FOUR: Reduce Alcoholic Beverages.

Since alcohol oxidizes rapidly in the body, it just makes your system work harder. More work, more heat. Also, beer has a high caloric content. So if you yearn for a beer after a hard day at the salt mine, DON'T. Better you should portake of iced tea, lemonade or water. That goes for Tom Collins, too, dearie.

FIVE: Avoid Sunburn.

Yes, Old Sol is packed with Vitamin D and a tan looks healthy, but take it easy. Ration your self on sunlight.

SIX: Develop Proper Mental Attitude.

This is a nebulous sort of suggestion, but the State Health experts say it can be the most important. Think cool and you'll feel cool.

Good Old Summer

Don't let yourself fret about the heat. Think how wonderful is summertime, when the livin' is easy. Much better than shoveling snow, and cheaper than shoveling coal.

Relax, and don't be a grouch. When the air feels oppressive, feel the goose pimples? Friend, you're cured.

See This, Wifey?

TWO: Avoid Exertion. Vigorous manual labor, especially in the noonday sun, can be very harmful. Point this out to the Little Sarge when she tells you to mow the lawn Saturday afternoon. Fishing is healthier.

THREE: Reduce Diet.

This is probably a good tip for four seasons, but we won't go into that. Doctors say a balanced diet with low caloric intake is

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as they hurried to complete their tasks. And the business of moving seemed a lot easier and smoother to some of the veterans of two other post-war encampments.

"This is a helluva lot smoother than last year," said Sgt. Ernest (Ernie) Langford, 1124 Broadway, son of James Langford, former Democratic candidate for Young Women's Christian Association, 725 N. Pennsylvania St.

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as they hurried to complete their tasks. And the business of moving seemed a lot easier and smoother to some of the veterans of two other post-war encampments.

"This is a helluva lot smoother than last year," said Sgt. Ernest (Ernie) Langford, 1124 Broadway, son of James Langford, former Democratic candidate for Young Women's Christian Association, 725 N. Pennsylvania St.

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as they hurried to complete their tasks. And the business of moving seemed a lot easier and smoother to some of the veterans of two other post-war encampments.

"This is a helluva lot smoother than last year," said Sgt. Ernest (Ernie) Langford, 1124 Broadway, son of James Langford, former Democratic candidate for Young Women's Christian Association, 725 N. Pennsylvania St.

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as they hurried to complete their tasks. And the business of moving seemed a lot easier and smoother to some of the veterans of two other post-war encampments.

"This is a helluva lot smoother than last year," said Sgt. Ernest (Ernie) Langford, 1124 Broadway, son of James Langford, former Democratic candidate for Young Women's Christian Association, 725 N. Pennsylvania St.

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as they hurried to complete their tasks. And the business of moving seemed a lot easier and smoother to some of the veterans of two other post-war encampments.

"This is a helluva lot smoother than last year," said Sgt. Ernest (Ernie) Langford, 1124 Broadway, son of James Langford, former Democratic candidate for Young Women's Christian Association, 725 N. Pennsylvania St.

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as they hurried to complete their tasks. And the business of moving seemed a lot easier and smoother to some of the veterans of two other post-war encampments.

"This is a helluva lot smoother than last year," said Sgt. Ernest (Ernie) Langford, 1124 Broadway, son of James Langford, former Democratic candidate for Young Women's Christian Association, 725 N. Pennsylvania St.

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as they hurried to complete their tasks. And the business of moving seemed a lot easier and smoother to some of the veterans of two other post-war encampments.

"This is a helluva lot smoother than last year," said Sgt. Ernest (Ernie) Langford, 1124 Broadway, son of James Langford, former Democratic candidate for Young Women's Christian Association, 725 N. Pennsylvania St.

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as they hurried to complete their tasks. And the business of moving seemed a lot easier and smoother to some of the veterans of two other post-war encampments.

"This is a helluva lot smoother than last year," said Sgt. Ernest (Ernie) Langford, 1124 Broadway, son of James Langford, former Democratic candidate for Young Women's Christian Association, 725 N. Pennsylvania St.

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as they hurried to complete their tasks. And the business of moving seemed a lot easier and smoother to some of the veterans of two other post-war encampments.

"This is a helluva lot smoother than last year," said Sgt. Ernest (Ernie) Langford, 1124 Broadway, son of James Langford, former Democratic candidate for Young Women's Christian Association, 725 N. Pennsylvania St.

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as they hurried to complete their tasks. And the business of moving seemed a lot easier and smoother to some of the veterans of two other post-war encampments.

"This is a helluva lot smoother than last year," said Sgt. Ernest (Ernie) Langford, 1124 Broadway, son of James Langford, former Democratic candidate for Young Women's Christian Association, 725 N. Pennsylvania St.

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as they hurried to complete their tasks. And the business of moving seemed a lot easier and smoother to some of the veterans of two other post-war encampments.

"This is a helluva lot smoother than last year," said Sgt. Ernest (Ernie) Langford, 1124 Broadway, son of James Langford, former Democratic candidate for Young Women's Christian Association, 725 N. Pennsylvania St.

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as they hurried to complete their tasks. And the business of moving seemed a lot easier and smoother to some of the veterans of two other post-war encampments.

"This is a helluva lot smoother than last year," said Sgt. Ernest (Ernie) Langford, 1124 Broadway, son of James Langford, former Democratic candidate for Young Women's Christian Association, 725 N. Pennsylvania St.

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as they hurried to complete their tasks. And the business of moving seemed a lot easier and smoother to some of the veterans of two other post-war encampments.

"This is a helluva lot smoother than last year," said Sgt. Ernest (Ernie) Langford, 1124 Broadway, son of James Langford, former Democratic candidate for Young Women's Christian Association, 725 N. Pennsylvania St.

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as they hurried to complete their tasks. And the business of moving seemed a lot easier and smoother to some of the veterans of two other post-war encampments.

"This is a helluva lot smoother than last year," said Sgt. Ernest (Ernie) Langford, 1124 Broadway, son of James Langford, former Democratic candidate for Young Women's Christian Association, 725 N. Pennsylvania St.

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as they hurried to complete their tasks. And the business of moving seemed a lot easier and smoother to some of the veterans of two other post-war encampments.

"This is a helluva lot smoother than last year," said Sgt. Ernest (Ernie) Langford, 1124 Broadway, son of James Langford, former Democratic candidate for Young Women's Christian Association, 725 N. Pennsylvania St.

"Well, I'll be damed," a grizzled, old sergeant cussed as a chorus of "yoo-hoo's" arose from a couple of GIs. They didn't tell us we were going to get women companions."

But the men were serious most of the time as