

Mrs. Samuel S. Rumford . . . first step in making grape jelly.

It's Time to Make Jelly

By JEAN TABBERT

IT'S JELLY-MAKING time, with grapes and plums at their lushest of the year.

Don't make the sweet bread topping in large quantities, though, it produces a poor product. That's what Mrs. Samuel S. Rumford, 5202 E. 10th St., advises.

Mrs. Rumford has eight bearing grape vines on her half acre lot, and a dozen new ones her husband planted this year. She annually puts up the purple fruit for her family.

Besides the amount warning, Mrs. Rumford also says not to use too heavy a cloth when the fruit is hung up to drain. Choose medium-weight unbleached muslin. Hang it up to allow at least an hour to drip. Don't squeeze the juice out of the bag because it leaves the jelly cloudy, Mrs. Rumford stresses.

She's the mother of Mrs. Gayle Chriswell, a assistant home demonstration agent, and a son, Samuel Jr., who'll enter Purdue University this year. Two of her favorite recipes follow.

GRAPE JELLY

Wash three pounds of fully ripe grapes. Partially cover with water and simmer for 10 minutes, the kettle covered. Place in a jelly cloth and drain.

Proportions of the liquid for making jelly: Five cups juice, seven cups sugar, one box powdered pectin. Then follow the cooking directions of the brand of pectin used.

BLUE RASPBERRY PRESERVES

Make a heavy syrup of one pound sugar for each pound of plums used. Add the plums to the hot syrup and cook until the plums are clear and the syrup jelled.

Pack in hot sterilized jars and cool.

Shellac Use Given

Give your bread and vegetable boards a thin coating of shellac before using them to prevent discoloration and to ward off penetration of liquids which will deteriorate wood fibers.

Make Coffee In Clean Pot

The best coffee comes from a really clean coffee pot, according to food specialist. For this reason many homemakers prefer coffee makers made of porcelain enamel.

They are easy to keep clean and every-day care is extremely simple. A porcelain enameled pot requires only a thorough washing in warm, soapy water after each using.

However, even a porcelain telltale traces of coffee stain after a period of regular use.

To remove these discolorations fill the coffee pot with water. Add two or three tablespoons of household bleach and allow to soak for 15 minutes.

Then wash thoroughly with soapy water and rinse with clear hot water.

Blackwood on Bridge—*East Follows Rules Blindly; Loses Trick

NOW AND THEN you hear a player say with pride, "I NEVER lead from a king." This is supposed to indicate what a sound player he is.

Actually, it is pride misplaced. It is the same as saying, "My game is dull and unimaginative."

East in today's deal was such a player. They weren't going to catch him leading away from a king. This doubtful virtue resulted in South making his four heart contract.

North and South bid like madmen to reach their game. After East overcalled with a diamond, South had an extremely questionable free bid. And North, with his king of diamonds right under East's bid, surely would have done justice to his holding with a second round call of only three hearts.

Pitches Spade

HOWEVER, there they were in a spade from dummy on his good game and West opened the 10 of jack of diamonds. He gave up a diamond.

Dummy ducked and spade ruffed one on the board. East won with the queen. He and claimed the rest.

Of course this gave South plenty of time to extract trumps (finessing against West's king) and pitch

the spade department.

North dealer.

Neither side vulnerable.

that East should have shifted to the eight of spades at the second trick. Yes, leading away from his king. It was clear that his side would win no club tricks. They would win no hearts either unless West had both king and queen, which was very doubtful.

Additional Gimmick

TWO DIAMOND tricks could be won and East should have reasoned that if the necessary two additional tricks were available

the spade department.

There was the additional gimmick that the spades had to be taken while East still had control of the diamond suit.
