

Farm Vote Seen 5th District Key

Fighting Chance Held For Incumbent Walsh

A Second Martha Taft

Mrs. Beamer has done very well stumping the district with her husband and could be called a second Martha Taft — the Ohio Senator's able campaigning wife, who is too ill to take the hustings this time.

Both of the Beamers have shaken the hands of hundreds of citizens throughout the district. This is his second try at an elective office. He represented Wabash County in the 1949-50 state legislature.

Mr. Beamer is against communism and "socialistic trends" and some of his advertising seems to indicate he shares the view that wars are caused by electing Democrats.

In his own advertising, Mr. Walsh comes as near to following the Fair Deal platform of President Truman as anyone running in Indiana.

An Intra-Party Scrap

His fighting propensities haven't been confined to the GOP. Abetted by his secretary, Victor Hood Marion, he is up to his ears in an intra-party Democratic scrap in Mr. Hood's home town of Marion.

There the Old Guard Democrats resent Young Turks from the ranks of labor taking over the party. Mr. Hood is from the ranks of the AFL barbers union and is trying to get the AFL in Marion to turn out on election day for Mr. Walsh as strongly as they expect the CIO to do both here and in Kokomo.

Strong for Alex Campbell, the Democratic senatorial nominee, and his sponsor, Frank M. McHale, Indianapolis, Democratic National Committeeman, the Old Guard leaders are looking the other way so far as the Walsh candidacy is concerned.

This Marion group includes City Attorney Robert R. Batton, one-time Mayor Jack Edwards, H. D. Nesbitt, Grant County prosecutor; George W. Rauch, deputy prosecutor; Robert Milford, county attorney; Judge Edward C. Hayes and State Rep. Mark Hinkle.

Nod From Walsh Foes

The latter, running for re-election in Grant and Blackford Counties, runs political endorsements from such anti-Walsh outfitts as the Indiana State Medical Association.

So there is expected to be plenty of ticket-splitting on Nov. 7. The Republicans don't hang out their political washing with such abandon as do the Democrats, but there are plenty of them "fixing to vote for Walsh," particularly among the lower income groups.

Madison County, with its strong CIO-PAC, and the city government here in Democratic control, are expected to deliver for Mr. Walsh according to Fred Holland, the PAC head man.

Kokomo PAC gives the same report.

Here, however, they have the American Guard, Inc., under the direction of its head man, Charles W. Harbaugh, and he is working hard to defeat the Democratic Congressman.

The "Rich Man's PAC"

It has been dubbed "the rich man's PAC."

Local 940, UAW-CIO, doesn't belong to PAC. Their 500 members have just won a new contract with the Pierce Governor plant, which makes governors for jet planes. Vernet Turner, four-time president of the local, said they were too busy getting back to work to pay much attention to politics. He explained why they stay out of PAC.

"We are against all Republicans," he said, "and sometimes PAC approves one here or there. If they are worth PAC approval they should get over on the Democratic side. Republicans only tolerate them."

It is such talk that scares the older, well-heeled Democrats. They don't want their party to be purely farmer-labor. They think that Mr. Walsh does.

Alvah Jackley, Anderson GOP chairman who is at downtown headquarters here, is confident that it is a Republican year. He said Sen. Homer E. Capenhorn, seeking a second term, is popular with workers as well as employers and will carry Madison County. Mr. Beamer will run right along with him he declared. There is some Republican sulking.

ing, here, however. Paul Hamilton, Anderson banker, was one of the four GOP primary candidates for Congress. His supporters contend that Mr. Beamer was hand-picked by former Rep. Forrest Harness, Kokomo, who served 10 years as Congressman and was defeated by Mr. Walsh in 1948, when he (Harness) found out he couldn't get it himself.

Some think that the Harness label on such a dark horse as Mr. Beamer is causing him to run under a considerable handicap.

Mr. Beamer tut-tuts such talk.

He says all of his primary apponents are real nice guys and would make good Congressmen.

He doesn't even say that he himself will win. In this, as in all things, he is unlike Mr. Walsh.

Rebels Routed In Puerto Rico

Tanks Clean Up Band's Hideout

(Continued From Page One) fled rebel arms depot near the south coast. Rebel raiding squads attacked the governor's palace here and public buildings at several other points throughout the island.

Burn Buildings

The insurgents who occupied Jayuya were reported to have burned down the municipal building, post office, internal revenue building, a theater and two gas stations.

This latest terrorism, plus similar bloody and destructive incidents in at least 10 other Puerto Rican cities and towns, made the uprising the worst in Puerto Rican history.

But authorities reported that they had control of the situation everywhere but in Jayuya, and that 300 National Guard infantry men, supported by 10 to 15 medium tanks, had been sent to stamp the town.

Despite the official optimism that the uprising was almost at an end, some observers believed today might be bloodier than yesterday, when authorities estimate 20 policemen and more than 10 others, including rebels, were killed.

"Bunch of Gangsters"

In an interview at 2:30 a. m.

today Gov. Marin said new violent outbreaks had occurred in Utuado, Mayaguez and San Juan.

In Mayaguez at least two and one were killed.

The only thing I want to say is that everything he says is so extravagantly false I don't want to comment on it."

perhaps three policemen were killed.

Earlier outbreaks occurred in San Juan, Utuado, Naranjito, Penuelas, Arecibo, Ponce and other places.

Gov. Marin also reported that the Nationalists made a hit-and-run attack last night on the San Juan home of Attorney General Gelgel Polanco, wounding a police guard stationed there.

He said the Nationalists were a bunch of gangsters—gangsters with a fanatical desire to become some kind of martyrs in accordance with their strange ideology.

As yet, there is no indication that martial law will be ordered in San Juan. But the city was heavily guarded today.

The governor's palace was cordoned off by heavy concentrations of police and national guardmen.

Troops also were widely deployed around other public buildings. And police buzzed around the deserted streets in station wagons and jeeps.

Meantime, police in San Juan were believed preparing to grab Pedro Albizu Campos, 59, Nationalist party president who was evicted "more times than I can remember" because his wife squandered rent money. He said he lost his job last week because I had to stay home and look after her and the kids when I should have been at work."

Gov. Marin said Mr. Albizu's arrest had been ordered. But the Nationalist leader is surrounded by bodyguards in his apartment and may be preparing to resist arrest.

(In Havana, the Cuban house of representatives approved a motion early this morning calling on President Truman to guarantee the lives of Mr. Albizu and other revolutionary leaders in Puerto Rico.)

Christmas in 1948 when the mother had spent the pay check and money saved for the little girl's Christmas for drinks.

"There's nothing I hate more than to send a woman, especially a mother, to prison," said Juvenile Court Referee Lawrence Hinds as he passed sentence that will add up to almost 2 years if she is required to serve out the fine. "But they've got a good program there that might help her and I can't help but feel this is one case where the children will be better off without their mother."

'Greatest American,' He Declares Here

On the advice of police the father went to Juvenile Court.

The father, who at first said he still loved his wife and didn't want to testify, finally decided to do so "for the good of the kids."

He said the family had been evicted "more times than I can remember" because his wife squandered rent money. He said he lost his job last week because I had to stay home and look after her and the kids when I should have been at work."

The woman's police record bore out his story: An arrest with 180 days sentence and $500 fine for child neglect in 1945 when the father was in the Navy and eight arrests and convictions for drunkenness, vagrancy, child neglect and disorderly conduct in the past five years.

Immediately after the war the State Department wanted to abandon the base, he said, but the American press hammered arrests was three days before its retention.
