Operation Homefolks Opens For Men of 28th Division

By LEON W. RUSSELL, Times Staff Writer

CAMP ATTERBURY, Nov. 11—The joyful tears of family reunions washed away homesickness today for men of the 109th Infantry Regiment of the 28th Division.

Lonely weeks of longing for parents, wives, children and sweethearts ended as more than 500 guests, mostly from northeastern Pennsylvania, poured into Camp Atterbury in the regiment's "Operation Homefolks."

The regiment gave full honors to its visitors, most of whom came by special train from Scranton, Pa., home town of most of the 109th's personnel.

Brig. Gen. T. Linus Hoban, assistant division commander and a Lackawanna County, Pa., judge, gave the address of greeting as the regiment, in formation, welcomed its guests on the air strip adjoining the barracks.

Men who had guests were excused from the ceremonies, and stood waiting for the buses to bring the visitors from Indianapolis, where they had detrained.

With hugs and kisses, shouts of glee and more than a few tears, the soldiers swarmed toward the buses.

Army blankets were issued as protection against the chill of the coldest Armistice Day in six years, and the GIs sat on bleachers with their guests to watch the ceremonies.

They took their guests through the barracks, to show them how a soldier lives.

Then the men were on their own.

Parents, wives and children ate with their soldiers in company mess.

The cooks hadn't gone to any special trouble. They served regular Army fare in regular Army style, so that the worried home folk could be assured their boys weren't being starved.

There was a show in the regimental gymnasium in the afternoon for those who wanted to go. The regimental band of 32 pieces played, and the 75-voice regimental glee club made its coldest Armistice Day in six years, and the GIs sat on bleachers with their guests to watch the ceremonies.

Special Services presented a GI variety show, which lasted an hour and a half.

Some Too Busy But a lot of the men were too busy with other things to go to the show.

Cpl. John B. Maturani, Milton, Pa., of Company L, was married this afternoon in the regimental chapel to Miss Dawn Craig, Bloomsburg, Pa.

They left the chapel beneath the crossed rifles of an honor guard and went to nearby Franklin for a reception.

Maj. Martin A. Roche, Catholic chaplain who performed the ceremony, was unable to attend the reception.

In fact, Father Roche was unable to spend much time with his own guests. They were his sisters, the Misses Mary, Alice and Cathryn Roche, all of Scranton.

Participation in the memorial services in the morning, talking with parents who wanted to meet him, hearing of confessions to-night, and a schedule of four services tomorrow, left him with little time for family affairs.

Give Up Passes In late afternoon, busses lined up at the camp to take the soldiers and their guests back to Indianapolis, where the visitors Edward Puhl of Scranton, that it would be nice if the boys' families could visit the camp on Thanksgiving.

Mr. Puhl got in touch with Pennsylvania Railroad officials.

Thanksgiving would be difficult, railroad officials said. Too many other people traveling. But they could arrange an Armistice Day excursion.

Nine coaches and a baggage car were needed to bring the 312 visitors who came by rail.

In the baggage car were 300 cases of beer for the boys, contributed by a Pennsylvania brewery. There also were four pianos and other furniture for the company day rooms at camp.

Another 160 visitors reached camp in their own automobiles.

The visitors will leave Indianapolis tomorrow.

Tons of Meat Butchered, But Where Does It Go?

(Continued From Page One) bad it was. But the remark I best remember came from an old fellow to whom I said, "It's pretty bad out here, ain't it, old timer?"

"Yes, it is," he answered. "It was worse until The Times came."

'We Fix What Old Folks Like' (Continued From Page One) farm inmates at Julietta get 11 ounces of meat per day while the average U. S. citizen eats only about 6 1/2 ounces a day.

Mr. Barrett assured me: "We consume everything we raise and eat it. We don't sell one ounce of it."

I checked the commercial meat purchases of the home for two bags of money back into the safe of what Supt. Barrett himself called "average" weeks. They were the weeks of Oct. 14 and Oct. 27—the same period Re-bourne was working there.

The week of Oct. 14, 1950, Vogel Market billed them $368.12 for 226 pounds of beef, 250 pounds of sausage, 140 pounds of frank, 278 pounds of bologna, 260 pounds of bacon, 260 pounds of smoked fowl, 20 pounds of dried beef and 56 pounds of braunschweiger.

The week of Oct. 27 the same market sent a bill for $247.55 for 406 pounds of bacon, 120 pounds of wieners, 488 pounds of beef, 198 pounds of cream cheese, 397 pounds of pork roast and 146 pounds of smoked sausage.

THAT'S 1490 pounds one week and 1557 pounds another—excepting the cheese! At an average of 1400 pounds of purchased meat per week.

I noticed there was no meat for dinner the day I was there, and Mr. Barrett told me:

"What people don't understand is that a lot of these old folks can't chew meat."

Bandits Scared Of Postal Funds

The threat of Federal prosecution saved the South West Department Store, 961 S. West St., several hundred dollars last night.

Two armed bandits entered the store, Alfred George, owner, told police, and forced him to open the safe. He said they tossed two purchases of the home for two bags of money back into the safe of what Supt. Barrett himself called "average" weeks.

In leaving, however, the armed bandits took $165 from a customer, William Halloran, of 1283 S. Missouri St. Estel Rorde, 3725 S. Dexter St., was robbed of $40.
