China Reds Dupes Of Russ-Acheson

Leaves Door Open To Peace in Korea

to those who expected a major policy pronouncement or some answer to what do we do now in Korea.

This expectation arose from the fact that the speech was broadcast and televised at a time when government officials are trying to find an answer to meet Red China's challenge in Korea. The building was prompted by radio and TV networks not by the State Department, it was disclosed.

Mr. Acheson originally intended to deliver the speech in person at a meeting of the National Council of Churches of Christ in Cleveland, O. But the Korean developments forced him to speak from his office here.

He had to revise his remarks, as he explained, to take cognizance of a situation which "holds danger for the peace of the world." He reflected the gravity felt here among officials.

He made no attempt to proffer false hopes and gave a somewhat chilling and unrelieved picture of what lies ahead.

Hopes for Quick Action

He expressed hope that the United Nations will respond firmly to the "unparalleled danger" in Korea.

The United Nations cannot be intimidated by this new challenge to its authority," he asserted, in what appeared to be a bid to reassure members of that body. Officials here are believed to feel that the United States must await United Nations action or some greater development of sentiment at Lake Success before they can work out a hard approach.

Working up to his indictment of the Soviet Union, Mr. Acheson said the Chinese Communists—if they continue to war upon the United Nations—will "vastly increase the danger to the whole fabric of world peace."

"And among the tragedies of this reckless course would be that it would spring from no interest of China or the Chinese people." Then directly assailing Russia, he said the Soviet rulers have made clear their "fundamental design" which was to subvert or forcibly destroy the free countries.

"The hostility of Soviet intentions, taken alone, would not produce so grave a threat," he declared.

No Hike Ordered in State Draft Quotas

United Nations' military reverses in Korea have not resulted in increased draft quotas in Indiana for the time being, Brig. Gen. Robinson Hitchcock, state draft director and adjutant general, said today.

"We have no indication draft quotas will be stepped up. We are proceeding normally," he said.

The general added that he had no additional military information on the status of Indiana's National Guard units or any military reserve organizations.

• Yes, even with the requested higher rates—the price you'll pay for an even better, even finer telephone service will still be less than 1¢ an hour!

WHAT ELSE BUT THE TELEPHONE!

True—you seldom need to use the telephone in the "wee small hours." But, you sleep more soundly just knowing that it's there. Always ready to summon help—to quiet fears—to put you in instant touch with others.

What is this peace of mind worth to you? It costs less than 1¢ an hour!

Truman 'Considering' Use Of Atom Bomb in Korea

shook his head and said the thing before the United Nations was action against the Chinese Communists.

He then added that use of the weapon would be up to the military men in the field. Our commanders, he said, would have charge of the use of all weapons. (But by law, use of the A-bomb must be authorized by the President.)

Mr. Truman was admittedly grave and worried about the recent reverses suffered by United Nations forces in Korea, but he said that this should not alter our determination to stand by "the cause of a just and peaceful world order . . .

"The Chinese attack was made in great force, and it still continues," he said. "It has resulted in the forced withdrawal of large parts of the United Nations command. The battlefield situation is uncertain at this time. We may suffer reverses as we have suffered them before. But the forces of the United Nations have no intention of abandoning their mission in Korea."

After disclosing that he has called a meeting tomorrow with leaders of both parties to ask for urgent consideration of the appropriations, the President added that this was time for all Americans to put aside differences and unite in firmness and mutual determination.

Mr. Truman would not say how large an increase he will ask in the size of the Army, Navy and Air Force. His statement said only: "We shall rapidly increase our own military strength." He also referred to "a substantial amount" of money for the atomic energy commission and "large amounts" for the three services.

The President was questioned at some length about the prospects for full mobilization in this country. He would not supply any specific details other than saying it was always under consideration.

"How close are we to full mobilization?" he was asked.

He said he would have to see how this thing (the Korean situation) works out.

Court Reunites Deaf Mother, Baby

Offers to Help Woman Pour In

The Welfare Department explained its only function was to house the child until the mother could again care for it. Family Service Association was in charge of the case work, and was working with the Children's Bureau. Juvenile Court was brought into the picture when it issued the wardship order to the Welfare Department.

Family Service Association said it was apparently an oversight that its agency failed to be in court with the mother or to take over care for her immediately after her dismissal.

However, the mother today brushed away the explanations. She said she had $150 and could work to take care of the child as she had done in California, before coming back to Indianapolis.

"All these agencies are trying to help me now, the girl who was orphaned in childhood said. "Why didn't they help me when I was 17, out on the streets on my own?"

Buddy Brings News of Death

Family Gets Word 3 Months Later

Fighting side by side, Pfc. White and Sgt. Elsperger were wounded slightly on Aug. 8. They were treated in a hospital, they went back into the line.

"It was sometime between Aug. 15 and 20—I don't know just when, days and nights are all the same out there," Sgt. Elsperger said.

"One of the boys got hit and I ordered our men back. But Pfc. White shouted 'I'm going after one of them,' and went forward.

"Then there was a big blast. Nothing was left of him."

"Sgt. Elsperger said it was a big explosion, he didn't know how he was lucky enough to get off with just a leg blown off," Mrs. Allen said.

Sgt. Elsperger had arrived in the United States Sept. 9, the day before the Whites were notified their son was wounded.

Mrs. Allen then telephoned the Defense Department again.

Officials offered one ray of hope. It could have been just like that," she was told. "But Sgt. Elsperger was badly wounded, he could have been mistaken."

Sgt. Elsperger was so certain, however, that Mrs. Allen feels there is little hope.

Pfc. White was born in Indianapolis, attended Broad Ripple High School before joining the Army Oct. 3, 1948. He trained at Camp Breckenridge, Ky.

'Billy the Kid' May Come to Life Again Today

SANTA FE, N. M., Nov. 30 (UP)—A page out of the old west comes to life today when a grizzled old man who claims to be the fabulous outlaw, "Billy the Kid," matches wits with the governor of New Mexico.

Gov. Thomas Mabry will get out of a sick bed to confer with several distinguished historians and "Billy" over his application for a pardon in connection with the 1878 murder of Sheriff William Brady.

It has long been presumed that the legendary gunman was shot to death by Sheriff Pat Garrett on July 14, 1881. But periodically since that date "Billy's" have come forth to claim ownership of the silver six-guns that killed 21 frontiersmen.
